WAS A HIGH PRICED MAN.

Traveling Occultist Soaks a Farmer $75 for Services.

The authorities are keeping their eyes peeled for a slick stranger, who, it is claimed, has been getting some easy money from the country people in this county.

The story goes that he poses as an occultist or eye doctor and that recently he landed a farmer near Milwaukee to the tune of $75.00. The farmer had been having some trouble with his eyes, and at the opportune moment the stranger happened along.

The farmer swallowed the entire story and the traveling "doctor" furnished him with a pair of glasses and wrote out a prescription, securing a check of $75.00 for his services.

After it was all over the farmer decided that he had been swindled and notified the officers of the law who have since been on the lookout for the man. Up to date he has failed to put in an appearance.

FIRST FARMERS MEETING.

Will be Held at the Marshfield Sub-Station August 1st.

On Friday, August 1st, we plan to hold the first farmers meeting at the Marshfield Sub-station, located two and a half miles southeast of Marshfield. A basket dinner picnic in the grove near the farm will be a part of the program. Lemonade and coffee will be served free.

The meeting is to be a very informal one; short talks will be given by members of the College of Agriculture during the forenoon. In the afternoon Professors F. L. Mustack and E. J. Delwiche will go over the farm and speak with reference to the activities of the soil and agronomy department.

Both the Soil and the Northwestern trains will stop at the Wood County Asshine Siding, which is only a few rods from the farm.

We desire your co-operation and your presence at this meeting. Any farmer that you can do to make this meeting known to your subscribers and others who are interested in this work will be greatly appreciated.

F. L. Mustack.

State of Wisconsin, Wood County, SS.—Notice is hereby given that the County Board of Review of Income Tax Assessment for the County of Wood will meet at the office of the County Clerk in said county in the Court House at Grand Rapids on the 11th day of August, 1913, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day to hear complaints and review the assessment of income made by the assessor.

Andrew P. Ben, Assessor of Income, 26th District.

Lost in the Woods.

Frederick Horton, Sr., who resides about three miles up river in the village of Iron, was lost on Manitowish Island last Tuesday and wandered around for three days before he was found. He had been without food all this time and when discovered was wet to the skin.

Mr. Horton was taken to his home where he subsequently recovered from the unusual exposure and was none the worse for his experience. As the old gentleman is 93 years of age the outcome of the affair is most remarkable.

East Side Will be Paved.

The board of public works held a meeting on Thursday and decided to do the paving of the east side this season, notwithstanding the fact that all of the contractors who bid on the proposition have backed out. The city will do the work by the day and expect to start on it in the near future.

Hereafter where the city has taken up work of this kind it has been done so cheaply or cheaper than when performed by contract.

Picnic Being Held.

The annual picnic of the Congregational Sunday school is being held at the pavilion today. The members of the school met at the church and marched across the bridge at 10:30 each carrying a flag, and they made a brave appearance. A program has been arranged for the day and there should be a big time.

Still Just Women.

Geneva, Ill., has lost its chance of a public kindergarten because the women voters did not turn out and vote for it. And the reason that many of them stood at home, according to their own leaders, was because they could not appear at the polls in gowns as assumptions as those of their wealthy sisters. The saloons of Phoenix, Arizona are still flourishing because the women voters of that town made up their minds that too much prohibition would scare away transient visitors and empty the barroom houses.

It ought to require old fogies who feared suffrage would change women for the worse to find that she remains with the vote pretty much what she was without it—a pleasantly feminine creature with feminine weaknesses, yet with shrewd intuitions and as to what is good for the home exchequer.

Nobody can say that men have not gone to the polls or stand away from the polls for reasons far less creditable.

LOST—On Saturday a brown Stetson hat on the Seneca road between this city and Pittsville. Finder will please return to A. B. Sutor at the Tribune office.

STRUCK BY THE STREET CAR.

Otto Barker, Colored, Sustains Severe Injuries Sunday Night.

Otto Barker, the colored man, who shines shoes at the east side pool room, was struck by a motor car on the line between here and Nekoma on Sunday night, and Mr. Barker can consider himself pretty lucky that he is now taking lessons on a bier.

Barker and two companions had spent the evening at the Switch saloon near Port Edwards, and decided to come home on the car that arrives here at 10:30. With this end in view they went out to the track and tried to flag the car. They were seen by the motorman, Al Bunde as he came around the curve, but as there is no stopping place there it is not customary to make a stop at that point. As the car neared them two of the men stepped from the track, but Barker remained on the rails, and notwithstanding the fact that the emergency brake was applied, the car still had sufficient headway to strike him with considerable force.

The man was picked up and brought to this city where a surgeon gave him all possible attention and it is probable that he will entirely recover from his wounds. His most serious injury was a cut over the left eye and he also had a small cut on his left leg. Of course he was shaken up and bruised considerably.

Baseball League Formed.

Grand Rapids is now a member of a baseball league. It isn't the biggest league in the country but they play ball on the same sized diamond as the fellows that put down $15,000 a year. The other towns in the league are Nekoma, Stevens Point, and Marshfield, and a schedule of games has been arranged to fill out the balance of the season, lasting from August and September.

At a meeting held last Thursday, Frank Abel of this city was elected president of the league and John Manske of Nekoma secretary. An effort is being made to have the schedule so arranged that there will be a game at the local grounds every Sunday by having the Nekoma games played here, but many of the Nekoma people are objecting strenuously to this arrangement.

However, satisfactory arrangements were made and it is so arranged that there will be a game in this city every Sunday. Following is the schedule as arranged:

August 3—Marshfield vs. Nekoma at Marshfield.

August 3—Grand Rapids vs. Stevens Point at Grand Rapids.

August 10—Stevens Point vs. Nekoma at Stevens Point.

August 10—Marshfield vs. Grand Rapids at Grand Rapids.

August 17—Marshfield vs. Stevens Point at Marshfield.

August 17—Grand Rapids vs. Nekoma at Grand Rapids.

August 21—Marshfield vs. Nekoma at Grand Rapids.

August 24—Stevens Point vs. Grand Rapids at Stevens Point.

August 24—Grand Rapids vs. Marshfield at Marshfield.

August 31—Stevens Point vs. Nekoma at Grand Rapids.

September 7—Stevens Point vs. Marshfield at Stevens Point.

September 7—Nekoma vs. Grand Rapids at Grand Rapids.

September 14—Nekoma vs. Marshfield at Marshfield.

September 14—Grand Rapids vs. Stevens Point at Grand Rapids.

September 21—Grand Rapids vs. Marshfield at Grand Rapids.

September 21—Stevens Point vs. Nekoma at Stevens Point.

September 28—Marshfield vs. Stevens Point at Marshfield.

September 28—Grand Rapids vs. Nekoma at Grand Rapids.

Death of Mrs. Ristow.

Mrs. William Ristow died on Sunday, July 27th, after an illness of a year or more, death being due to cancer. Mrs. Ristow had been getting steadily worse for some time past and her death was not unexpected by those who knew her condition.

Deceased was a native of Germany, and had been a resident of this city for ten years past. Besides her husband she is survived by one daughter and six sons, the children being Mrs. E. C. Ketchum, Rev. August Ristow of Auburnville, Herman, Paul and Rudolph of this city, William of Savage, Minn., and Charles of Montevideo, Minn.

The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon from the west side Lutheran church, Rev. William Norrman, pastor of the church, officiating.

Mrs. Ristow was a woman who was well liked by all who knew her, and will be greatly missed in her large circle of friends.

AUTOMOBILE TURNS OVER.

Chris Hassel Has Thrilling Experience Sunday Morning.

What might have been a much more serious accident occurred to Chris Hassel and family on Sunday morning while out driving in the Ford touring car belonging to Mr. Hassel. As it was Mrs. Hassel who was driving, and Mr. Hassel was seated beside her, considerably, but the rest of the party escaped without injury.

The car contained Mr. and Mrs. Hassel, Mrs. O. Roosen and three children and Mrs. Caspar and son. When they attempted to turn the corner north of the Green Bay and Western track on the west side the car turned over and the entire party was pinned beneath the top and people from nearby houses had to lift the car from them in order to release them.

The top was broken from the car and smashed up to some extent, but outside of this very little damage was done to the machine. It was a narrow escape, however, and might have resulted much more seriously.

Truett-Close.

Helena Daily Record.—One of the prettiest weddings of the week was celebrated Wednesday morning at half past eight at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Henry on Dearborn Avenue, when Miss Gwendolyn Truett and J. J. Close were married.

As the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Octavia Rider on the violin and Oscar Veatch on the piano, were heard, the bride party entered the music room and took their places before Reverend L. A. Wilson, who performed the ceremony.

The bride entered the room with her sister, Mrs. Edwards, and preceded them came the maid of honor, Miss Helen Crum, and best man Bert Chose. A canopy of white carnations and pink roses was arranged in one corner of the music room, and the corner with potted plants and vines for a background made a pretty setting for the wedding ceremony.

The bride wore a handsome traveling suit of blue broadened silk and the maid of honor wore cream silk with lace trimmings. The ring bearer was Miss Lucile Henry and the flower girl was Miss Lorraine Henry, and both little maids were daintily attired in white.

After the ceremony an elaborate wedding breakfast was served. The dining room was a bower of pink and white. The chandelier was festooned with pink and white carnations and roses and white carnations were used as a centerpiece for the table which was lighted with many pink and white candles.

Mr. and Mrs. Chose left on the morning train for a trip to Glacier park, and upon their return will make their home in this city. The guests at the wedding accompanied them to the train and the bride threw her bouquet as she stood on the steps of the train and it was caught by Miss Helen Crum.

Mrs. Chose is a new comer in Helena, but has made hosts of friends by her charm and vivacity during her short residence here. Mr. Chose is a partner in the Veatch-Chose Drug Co., and is one of the prominent young business men in the city.

Elks Will Play Ball.

The Wausau Elks will play ball here on Friday afternoon with the local Elks. At the game the visiting Elks will be entertained by the local Elks, who take possession October 1st. The farm consists of 160 acres of land, including all stock and personal property and the price paid was $12,000. We understand it is the intention of Mr. and Mrs. Ohmolt to move to this city to make their future home.

Good Catch.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Welsch, former residents of Heineman, stopped over during their last evening to spend a few hours at the L. Fried home. They had just returned from an outing and fishing trip at Bass Lake and were on their way to their home at Grand Rapids. They took with them a prize catch of forty-five bass.—Merrill Herald.

—Beginning August 10, 1913, Sunday mail will be collected at 6 P. M. from down town to Grand Avenue from the bridge to the C. M. & St. P. depot, and boxes on First and Second Streets from Vine Street to the library.

Robert Nash, P. M.

Berdella Jero, the nine year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jero, died on Friday night after an illness of several weeks, the cause of her death being pneumonia.

The funeral was held on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the German Lutheran church on the east side and interment was made in Forest Hill cemetery.

WAS A HOT GAME.

Grand Rapids and Nekoma Play Second of Series.

The Grand Rapids baseball team went to Nekoma on Sunday and cleaned the boys up down there by one point, the score being 1 to 0 at the end of the 9th inning.

Some of those people who saw the game said that the game was down there gave the Nekoma boys the best of it during the fore part of the argument, but after he found they could hold their own in fairly good shape he regained his nerve and umpired a good game.

There were several times during the latter part of the game when it looked as if Nekoma was going to even up the score, but they couldn't quite make it. Intense excitement prevailed and a large crowd was in attendance both from Nekoma and Grand Rapids and everybody pronounced it one of the best games that has been played in this neighborhood.

The only thing to mar the seeming hilarity of the occasion was when a bystander swatted the Nekoma policeman in the face with a pair of shoes. For some reason or other the officer resented this familiarity and started after the man who had done the swatting. Then somebody hit the policeman in the eye and this brought the fracas to a temporary cessation and before anything could be done the crowd rushed in and separated the belligerents. Outside of this everything was all right.

Barns and Stock Burned.

The stock and contents of three barns on the Walter Lyle farm in the town of Sigel were destroyed by fire on Saturday morning. The place is better known as the Griesbach homestead and has been occupied the past several months by Mike Sierck who had rented the place of Walter Lyle for five years.

The fire was discovered about two o'clock in the morning in the main barn by Mr. Sierck and his wife. A considerable headway at the time, Mr. Sierck at once made a race for the barn to get out his horses, but was unable to save any of them, and five work horses, and one calf as well as several chickens, and some farm machinery were consumed by the flames.

The loss of the three buildings is considered to be about $3,000 beside the loss of the five horses and calf which were owned by Mr. Sierck.

The latter were insured for only $500, which will mean considerable loss to him. On Saturday morning when seen by a Tribune representative Mr. Sierck was unable to state whether Mr. Lyle carried any insurance on the buildings as that gentleman was at Berlin.

This is the second bad loss Mr. Sierck has had in the past few weeks, only two weeks ago he lost a rather full blooded Holstein bull with tuberculosis which cost him over $500.

At the time of the fire most all the buildings were full of hay. It was with considerable difficulty that the house was saved. During his efforts to save the stock Mr. Sierck had his feet burned quite badly.

Back From Virginia.

Ed Coon, who went to Virginia last November, returned to this city on Friday. Mr. Coon is much taken up with the country down there and is of the opinion that there are many first class openings for the agriculturist from the north. He states that where northerners have settled and are using

The meeting is to be a very informal one; short talks will be given by members of the College of Agriculture during the forenoon. In the afternoon Professors F. L. Mushack and E. J. Dulwiche will go over the farm and speak with reference to the activities of the soil and agronomy department.

Both the Soe and the Northwestern trains will stop at the Wood County Assylum Station, which is only a few rods from the farm. We desire your co-operation and your presence at this meeting. Anything that you can do to make this meeting known to your subscribers and others who are interested in this work will be greatly appreciated.

Lost in the Woods.

Fred Horton, Sr., who resides about three miles up river in the village of Biron, was lost on Hunters Island last Tuesday and wandered around for three days before he was found. He had been without food all this time and whose discovery was wet to the skin. Mr. Horton was taken to his home where he subsequently recovered from the unusual exposure and was none the worse for his experience. As the old gentleman is 83 years of age the outcome of the affair is most remarkable.

East Side Will be Paved.

The board of public works held a meeting on Thursday and decided to do the paving in the east side this season, notwithstanding the fact that all of the contractors who bid on the proposition have backed out. The city will do the work by the day and expect to start on it in the near future. Therefore where the city has taken up work of this kind it has been done just as cheaply or cheaper than when performed by contract.

Opt the Woods.

Picnic Being Held.

The annual picnic of the Congregational Sunday school is being held at the pavilion today. The members of the school met at the church and marched across the bridge at 10:30 each carrying a flag, and they made a brave appearance. A program has been arranged for the day and there should be a big time.

Still Just Women.

Geneva, Ill., has lost its chance of a public kindergarten because the women voters did not turn out and vote for it. And the reason that many of them staid at home, according to their own leaders, was because they could not appear at the polls in gowns as scrumptious as those of their wealthy sisters. The saloons of Phoenix, Arizona are still flourishing because the women voters of that town made prohibition would scare away transient visitors and empty the boarding houses.

It ought to reassure old fogies who feared suffrage would change women for the worse to find that she remains with the vote pretty much what she was without it—a pleasantly feminine creature with feminine weaknesses, yet with shrewd intuitions withal as to what is good for the home exchequer.

Nobody can say that men have not gone to the polls or staid away from the polls for reasons far less creditable.

STRUCK BY THE STREET CAR.

Otto Barker, Colored, Sustains Severe Injuries Sunday Night.

Otto Barker, the colored man, who shines shoes at the east side pool room, was struck by a motor car on the line between here and Nekosia on Sunday night, and Mr. Barker can consider himself pretty lucky that he is now taking lessons on a harp.

Barker and two companions had spent the evening at the Switch saloon near Port Edwards, and decided to come home on the car that arrives here at 10:30. With this end in view they went out to the track and tried to flag the car. They were seen by the motorman, Al Bunde as he came around the curve, but as there is no stopping place there it is not customary to make a stop at that point. As the car neared them two of the men stepped from the track, but Barker remained on the rails, and notwithstanding the fact that the emergency brake was applied, the car still had sufficient headway to strike him with considerable force.

The man was picked up and brought to this city where a surgeon gave him all possible attention and it is probable that he will entirely recover from his wounds. His most serious injury was a cut over the left eye and he also had a small cut on his left leg. Of course he was shaken up and bruised considerably.

Baseball League Formed.

Grand Rapids is now a member of a baseball league. It isn't the biggest league in the country but they play ball on the same sized diamond as the fellows that pull down $15,000 a year. The other towns in the league are Nekosia, Stevens Point, and Marshfield, and a schedule of games has been arranged to fill out the balance of the season; lasting thru August and September.

At a meeting held last Thursday, Frank Abel of this city was elected president of the league and John Marshall of Nekosia secretary. An effort is being made to have the schedule so arranged that there will be a game at the local grounds every Sunday by having the Nekosia games played here, but many of the Nekosia people are objecting strenuously to this arrangement.

However, satisfactory arrangements were made and it is so arranged that there will be a game in this city every Sunday. Following is the schedule as arranged:

August 1—Marshfield vs. Nekosia at Marshfield.

August 3—Grand Rapids vs. Stevens Point at Grand Rapids.

August 10—Stevens Point vs. Nekosia at Stevens Point.

August 16—Marshfield vs. Grand Rapids at Grand Rapids.

August 17—Marshfield vs. Stevens Point at Marshfield.

August 17—Grand Rapids vs. Nekosia at Grand Rapids.

August 21—Marshfield vs. Nekosia at Grand Rapids.

August 24—Stevens Point vs. Grand Rapids at Stevens Point.

August 31—Grand Rapids vs. Marshfield at Marshfield.

August 31—Stevens Point vs. Nekosia at Grand Rapids.

September 7—Stevens Point vs. Marshfield at Marshfield.

September 7—Nekosia vs. Grand Rapids at Grand Rapids.

September 14—Nekosia vs. Marshfield at Marshfield.

September 14—Grand Rapids vs. Stevens Point at Grand Rapids.

September 21—Grand Rapids vs. Marshfield at Grand Rapids.

September 21—Stevens Point vs. Nekosia at Stevens Point.

September 28—Marshfield vs. Stevens Point at Marshfield.

September 28—Grand Rapids vs. Nekosia at Grand Rapids.

Death of Mrs. Ristow.

Mrs. William Ristow died on Sunday, July 27th, after an illness of a year or more, death being due to cancer. Mrs. Ristow had been getting steadily worse for some time past and her death was not unexpected by those who knew her condition.

Deceased was a native of Germany, and had been a resident of this city for ten years past. Besides her husband she is survived by one daughter and six sons, the children being Mrs. E. C. Ketchum, Rev. August Ristow of Auburndale, Herman, Paul and Rudolph of this city, William of Savage, Minn., and Charles of Montevideo, Minn.

The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon from the west side Lutheran church, Rev. William Mommensen, pastor of the church, officiating.

Elks Will Play Ball.

The Wausau Elks will play ball here on Friday afternoon with the local Elks. After the game the visiting Elks will be entertained by the local lodge. Admission to the game will be free and anybody who cares to will be welcome to watch it.

Scandinavian Moravian Church.

On Sunday morning confirmation services will be held in the English language at 10:30 o'clock. This service will be followed by the celebration of the Holy Communion. The confirmands will be Roney and Jessine Rasmussen, Mathilda Anderson, Agnes Olson and Irene Carlson.

How About the Chowder?

Several weeks ago the east and west sides played a game of ball at the hall park, and it was agreed that losing team was to pay for a chicken chowder which was to be held up the river. The east sides won the game and are wondering if the price of chicken is prohibitory, or whether it is just a case of forgetfulness.

Improves the Appearance.

J. T. Stark is having the front of the Ideal theater finished in stucco and when entirely completed will present a handsome appearance. Those who visit this playhouse pronounce it to be one of the neatest of its kind anywhere hereabouts.

Grand Theatre Opens.

The Grand Theatre was opened to the public last Saturday night under new management. The new owner promises the public the best that is to be obtained in the moving picture line.

Reported Holdup.

Chris Thompson, who works at the brickyard, was in the city this morning and reported that two men held him up while he was on his way home Tuesday evening and robbed him of two dollars in cash.

Thompson said that he was riding home on a bicycle and that the two men who held him up were riding in a buggy and when they got to him they jumped out and grabbed him, and beat him up in bad shape.

Thompson's face shows evidence of decidedly rough handling and the police are on the lookout for the two men.

AUTOMOBILE TURNS OVER.

Chris Hassel Has Thrilling Experience Sunday Morning.

What might have been a much more serious accident occurred to Chris Hassel and family on Sunday morning while out driving in the Ford touring car belonging to Mr. Hassel. As it was Mrs. Hassel had two ribs broken and Mr. Hassel was bruised considerably, but the rest of the party escaped without injury.

The car contained Mr. and Mrs. Hassel, Mrs. O. Roosen and three children and Mrs. Chapar and son. When they attempted to turn the corner north of the Green Bay and Western track on the west side the car turned over and the entire party was pinned beneath the top and people from nearby houses had to lift the car from them in order to release them.

The top was broken from the car and smashed up to some extent, but outside of this very little damage was done to the machine. It was a narrow escape, however, and might have resulted much more seriously.

Truscott-Chose.

Helena Dally Record.—One of the prettiest weddings of the week was celebrated Wednesday morning at half past eight at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Henry on Dearborn Avenue, when Miss Gwendolyn Truscott and P. J. Chose were married.

As the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Octavia Rider on the violin and Oscar Venech on the piano, were heard, the bride entered the music room and took their places before Reverend L. A. Wilson, who performed the ceremony.

The bride entered the room with her sister, Mrs. Edwards, and proceeding then came the maid of honor, Miss Helen Crum, and best man Bert Chose. A canopy of white carnations and pink roses was arranged in one corner of the music room, and this corner with potted plants and vines for a background made a pretty setting for the wedding ceremony.

The bride wore a handsome traveling suit of blue broadcloth silk and the maid of honor wore a green silk with lace trimmings. The ring bearer was Miss Lucile Henry and the flower girl was Miss Louraine Henry, and both little maids were daintily attired in white.

After the ceremony an elaborate wedding breakfast was served. The dining room was a bower of pink and white. The chandelier was festooned with pink and white marigolds and pink roses and white carnations were used as a centerpiece for the table which was lighted with many pink and white candles.

Mr. and Mrs. Chose left on the morning train for a trip to Glacier park, and upon their return will make their home in this city. The guests at the wedding accompanied them to the train and the bride threw her bouquet as she stood on the steps of the train and it was

WAS A HIGH PRICED MAN.

Traveling Occultist Seeks a Farmer $75 for Services.

The authorities are keeping their eyes peeled for a slick stranger, who, it is claimed, has been getting some easy money from the country people in this county.

The story goes that he poses as an occultist or eye doctor and that recently he landed a farmer near Milladore in the town of $15.00. The farmer had been having some trouble with his eyes, and at the opportune moment the stranger happened along. He examined the farmer's eyes and told him he was in a bad way and that he was in danger of losing his eyesight.

The farmer swallowed the entire story and the traveling "doctor" furnished him with a pair of glasses and wrote out a prescription, securing a check of $75.00 for his services. After it was all over the farmer decided that he had been swindled and notified the officers of the law who have since been on the lookout for the man. Up to date he has failed to put in an appearance.

Mrs. William Ristow died on Sunday, July 27th, after an illness of a year or more, death being due to cancer. Mrs. Ristow had been getting steadily worse for some time past and her death was not unexpected by those who knew her condition.

Deceased was a native of Germany, and had been a resident of this city for ten years past. Besides her husband she is survived by one daughter and six sons, the children being Mrs. E. C. Ketchum, Rev. August Ristow of Ashland, Iowa, Paul and Rudolph of this city, William of Savage, Minn., and Charles of Montevideo, Minn.

Mrs. Ristow was a woman who was well liked by all who knew her, and will be greatly missed in her large circle of friends.

Blackwood-Brooks.

New London Press:—A quiet wedding took place last Saturday evening at five o'clock when Miss Ruth Blackwood of this city and Mr. James Emmet Brooks of Grand Rapids were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Thos. T. Hiler.

Only the immediate families of the bride and groom were present. A splendid luncheon was served at the conclusion of the ceremony and the bride and groom left for their future home in Grand Rapids at 6:30 the same evening. The bride is one of New London's most charming and accomplished young ladies and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Blackwood of this city. The bridegroom is the superintendent of the efficiency department of the Consolidated Water Power and Paper Co. of Grand Rapids, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. Brooks will be at home to their friends after August 1.

Reported Holdup.

Chris Thompson, who works at the brickyard, was in the city this morning and reported that two men held him up while he was on his way home Tuesday evening and robbed him of two dollars in cash.

Thompson said that he was riding home on a bicycle and that the two men who held him up were riding in a buggy and when they got to him they jumped out and grabbed him, and beat him up in bad shape.

AUTOMOBILE TURNS OVER.

Chris Hassel Has Thrilling Experience Sunday Morning.

What might have been a much more serious accident occurred to Chris Hassel and family on Sunday morning while out driving in the Ford touring car belonging to Mr. Hassel. As it was Mrs. Hassel had two ribs broken and Mr. Hassel was bruised up considerably, but the rest of the party escaped without injury.

The car contained Mr. and Mrs. Hassel, Mrs. O. Roosen and three children and Mrs. Caspar and son. When they attempted to turn the corner north of the Green Bay and Western track on the west side the car turned over and the entire party was pinned beneath the top and people from nearby houses had to lift the car from them in order to release them.

The top was broken from the car and smashed up to some extent, but outside of this very little damage was done to the machine. It was a narrow escape, however, and might have resulted much more seriously.

Truscott-Chose.

Helena Daily Record:—One of the prettiest weddings of the week was celebrated Wednesday morning at half past eight at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Henry on Dearborn Avenue, when Miss Gwendolyn Truscott and P. J. Chose were married.

As the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Octavia Rider on the violin and Oscar Veatch on the piano, were heard, the bride and groom entered the music room and took their places before Reverend L. A. Wilson, who performed the ceremony.

The bride entered the room with her sister, Mrs. Edwards, and preceding them came the maid of honor, Miss Helen Crum, and best man Bert Chose. A canopy of white carnations and pink roses was arranged in one corner of the music room, and this corner with potted plants and vines for a background made a pretty setting for the wedding ceremony.

The bride wore a handsome traveling suit of blue broadened silk and the maid of honor wore cream silk with lace trimmings. The ring bearer was Miss Lucile Henry and the flower girl was Miss Lorraine Henry, and both little maids were daintily attired in white.

After the ceremony an elaborate wedding breakfast was served. The dining room was a bower of pink and white. The chandelier was festooned with pink and white maline and pink roses and white carnations were used as a centerpiece for the table which was lighted with many pink and white candles.

Mr. and Mrs. Chose left on the morning train for a trip to Glacier park, and upon their return will make their home in this city. The guests at the wedding accompanied them to the train and the bride threw her bouquet as she stood on the steps of the train and it was caught by Miss Helen Crum.

Mrs. Chose is a new comer in Helena, but has made hosts of friends by her charm and vivacity during her short residence here. Mr. Chose is a partner in the Veatch-Chose Drug Co., and is one of the prominent young business men in the city.

How About the Chowder?

Several weeks ago the east and west sides played a game of ball at the ball park, and it was agreed that in losing team was to pay for a chicken chowder which was to be held up the river. The east sides won the game and are wondering if the price of chicken is prohibitory, or whether it is just a case of forgetfulness.

WAS A HOT GAME.

Grand Rapids and Nekosia Play Second of Series.

The Grand Rapids baseball team went to Nekosia on Sunday and cleaned the boys up down there by one point, the score being 1 to 0 at the end of the 8th inning.

Some of those people who saw the game said that the umpire down there gave the Nekosia boys the best of it during the first part of the argument, but after he found they could hold their own in fairly good shape he regained his nerve and umpired a good game.

There were several times during the latter part of the game when it looked as if Nekosia was going to even up the score, but they couldn't quite make it. The crowd excitement provided a large crowd was in attendance both from Nekosia and Grand Rapids and everybody pronounced it one of the best games that has been played in this neighborhood.

The only thing to mar the seeming hilarity of the occasion was when a bystander swatted the Nekosia policeman in the face with a pair of shoes. For some reason or other the officer resented this familiarity and started after the man who had done the swatting. Then somebody hit the policeman in the eye and this brought the fracas to a temporary standstill and before anything could be done the crowd rushed in and separated the belligerents outside of this everything was all right.

Barns and Stock Burned.

The stock and contents of three barns on the Walter Lyle farm in the town of Sigel were destroyed by fire on Saturday morning. The place is better known as the Griesbach home and has been occupied the past several months by Mike Sierck who had rented the place of Walter Lyle for five years.

The fire was discovered about two o'clock in the morning in the main barn by Mr. Sierck, and was made considerable headway at the time. Mr. Sierck at once made a race for the barn to get out his horses, but was unable to save any of them, and five work horses, and one colt as well as several chickens, and some farm machinery were consumed by the flames. The loss of the three buildings is considered to be about $3,000 besides the loss of the five horses and colt which were owned by Mr. Sierck. The latter were insured for only $600, which will mean considerable loss to him. On Saturday morning when seen by a Tribune representative Mr. Sierck was unable to state what Mr. Lyle carried down there and in the buildings as that gentleman was at Berlin.

This is the second bad loss Mr. Sierck has had in the past few weeks, only two weeks ago he lost a ragged full blooded Holstein bull with tuberculosis which cost him over $500.

At the time of the fire most all the buildings were full of hay. It was with considerable difficulty that the house was saved. During his efforts to save the stock Mr. Sierck had his feet burned quite badly.

Back From Virginia.

Ed Coon, who went to Virginia last November, returned to this city on Friday. Mr. Coon is much taken up with the country down there and is of the opinion that there are many first class openings for the agriculturist from the north. He states that where northerners have settled and are using the same progressive methods of tilling the soil and keeping it up as are done in this country they are making good money. Many of these Virginia farms are badly run down, having been crunched year after year without any effort being made to keep them up, so that some of the native farmers are barely eking out an existence. Mr. Coon states

WATSON STORY HIT

MULLHALL TELLS INVESTIGATORS HE MADE ERROR IN CHARGES AGAINST HIM.

FOUGHT ALBERT J. HOPKINS

Letters Tell of Illinois Senate Contest and Reveal New Lobby Branch—Worked for William R. McKinley and Others.

Washington, July 24.—Martin M. Mulhall, confessed lobbyist for the National Association of Manufacturers, retracted Tuesday the most serious charge he had made before the senate investigating committee. He had sworn that former Representative James E. Watson of Indiana was employed by private interests in 1909 while a member of the house to work for a tariff commission bill. In retraction he said Watson was not a member of the house at the time.

Reports that Watson was about to ask the District of Columbia grand jury to indict Mulhall on a charge of criminal libel were heard meanwhile about the investigating room.

Mulhall, who had been retracted, said he realized his mistake when he saw the date of a tariff convention in Indianapolis in February, 1909.

More of the Mulhall letters were filed while the ex-lobbyist was testifying. February 4, 1910, a letter to F. C. Schwabachman, Mulhall got into Illinois and brought in former Senator Hopkins, who was defeated for reelection by William Lorimer. Mulhall wrote of the senatorial deadlock at Springfield:

"We are spreading the impression that on account of the contemptible stand taken by Hopkins in the convention at Chicago last June, wherein he was extremely unfair to the manufacturing interests in refusing them a hearing before the committee on resolutions and packing that committee in favor of the Gompers crowd, he has in a large measure brought this fight on himself."

The letter also referred to W. B. McKinley of Illinois, then a representative in congress, as follows:

"There have been some votes cast for Mr. McKinley since the contest started, and Mr. Emery and I will try to gain his active influence for our people from this time on. He is extremely friendly at present and we are doing all we can to make this friendship much stronger."

The Emery to whom the witness referred was James A. Emery, described by Mulhall as "chief lobbyist" for the manufacturers' association. In another letter to Schwabachman, Mulhall said that he had been told by Mr. McKinley and others for voting to defeat the ship subsidy bill, which the manufacturers' association favored.

February 18, 1909, when the light on Hopkins was hot, Mulhall wrote Emery that he had had a long conference on political matters with Edward W. Childs, who was then in charge of the political warfare of Representative Jenkins in behalf of the manufacturers' association. He had been brought out before the committee, and that he took lines to Mr. Emery's office to see him. He was "astonished" but was "determined to find the cause of the trouble."

Another branch of the "insidious job" was disclosed in the day. The Mulhall letters referred to the fact that he had been told by Daniel P. Tuttle, president of the American Episcopal church, that he had been told by the late Justice Brewer of the federal supreme court, and other prominent men speak to St. Louis during a course of lectures given by the Citizens Industrial association.

Col. Martin M. Mulhall, testifying before the senate investigating committee Monday, charged that James E. Watson of Indiana, when a member of congress, accepted money in payment for his services in behalf of a tariff bill.

Mulhall said that Representative Watson was on the secret pay roll of the National Manufacturers' association, and that he received $250 a week, in addition to a lump sum of $500 paid him as a retainer.

The association, Mulhall testified, also promised Watson $10,000 in cash when the tariff commission bill was passed.

Martin M. Mulhall gave the senate lobby investigating committee his story Friday of the alleged offer in 1907-1908 to bribe Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, to desert the cause of labor and support the policies advocated by the National Association of Manufacturers.

WILL AID NICARAGUA

BRYAN OFFERS SENATORS TREATY MAKING U. S. RULER.

Secretary of State Urges That Arbitration Pacts With Several Nations Be Renewed.

Washington, July 22.—Secretary of State Bryan on Saturday laid before the senate committee on foreign relations a private conference a proposition to establish by treaty what amounts to an American protectorate over the republic of Nicaragua. Bryan proposes a protectorate similar to that now exercised over Cuba.

At the same conference Mr. Bryan urged that the United States should negotiate first in the United States with France, Great Britain and other countries.

The secretary of state went before the committee with a revised draft of the proposed Nicaragua treaty, negotiated first in the United States with France, Great Britain and other countries.

Under the proposed plan Nicaragua would agree to subordinate to the United States all her foreign relations.

That war should be declared without the consent of the United States.

That no treaties should be made with foreign governments that would tend to destroy its independence or that would give those governments a foothold in the republic.

That no public debt would be contracted beyond the ordinary resources of the government, as indicated by the ordinary revenues.

That the United States should have the right to intervene at any time to preserve Nicaragua's independence or to protect her property.

That the United States should have the exclusive right to build a canal across Nicaragua, and should have a 99-year lease to a naval base on the bay of Fonseca and in the Great Corn Bay and Little Corn Bay in the Caribbean sea.

That the United States should have the right to use the bay of Fonseca and in the Great Corn Bay and Little Corn Bay in the Caribbean sea.

50 KILLED IN FIRE

MOST OF VICTIMS OF BINGHAM-TON, N. Y., BLAZE ARE YOUNG GIRLS.

MANY JUMP TO EARTH

Terrific Burst of Flame Traps Toppers on Upper Floors of Building and Firemen Are Powerless to Save Them From Death.

Binghamton, N. Y., July 24.—Fifty-two persons, most of them women and girls, and all employed in the frame, tin and box factory of the Binghamton Clothing company, died in a fire which swept that building on Tuesday. Fifty more persons are injured, a dozen of them mortally.

In the city hospital and in private institutions are 30 injured.

Some two score persons are known to have escaped by a miracle from the building, which burst into flame like a tinderbox and became a roaring furnace in a short time after the first alarm was sounded. About 125 persons were in the factory when the fire broke out. They are believed to be in most of the ruins of the structure.

Around the scene of the disaster, the greatest city has ever known, thousands watched the workers in the glare of three big searchlights, many of them being held back by police from rushing into the burning building to seek the bodies of relatives or friends.

After the first fierce blast the fire seemed to burst from every other part of the building at once. Upon the fire escaped girls, women and men were clustered and inside others were being taken to the hospital.

When the firemen arrived in response to the telephone alarm they were unable to get within 200 feet of the burning building and the ends of the stream from their hose were turned into steam without effect upon the fire. The life nets and extension ladders of the firemen were equally useless. There was no chance for escape except the upper floors, except the last resort, to jump, and this they did, while others fell, shriveled and crumpled with the heat.

Scarcely one of the survivors was able to give a connected account of what took place on the upper floors of the factory when the flames reared, mostly women and girls, realized that their death was sweeping upon them.

The fire escapes were not large enough to hold all who rushed madly to the exits and there was a dash for the windows, the trapped victims screaming with pain as the flames swept upon them from behind and seared their bodies.

Then from dropping, they fell thick and fast. The building was only four stories high, and many who jumped even from the topmost floor escaped with their lives, although most of them were badly maimed.

The fourth floor that most of the women were working, and it was among these that death and injury were greatest.

The total money damage is not expected to exceed $100,000.

ATTACK TARIFF BILL

WON'T CUT LIVING EXPENSES, SAYS BURTON OF OHIO.

Senator Smoot of Utah Quotes From Wilson's Book in Denouncing the Measure.

Washington, July 23.—The Underwood-Simmons tariff bill continues to be attacked by Republican senators. Senator Burton of Ohio, expressing his assurance that it would fall, said it was "a measure to reduce the cost of living and to protect the interests of the people."

"This bill," said Senator Smoot, "is a partisan and sectional measure, the outcome of secret caucus methods such as never ruled before in the senate of the United States."

In his book, "The New Freedom," President Wilson says that there is no excuse for causing in congress, and in a speech in Indiana preceding his election he emphasized that point by asserting that there was no need for secrecy in congressional proceedings.

Yet not in the history of congress has there been anything like this in the preparation of a tariff bill.

"Governor Foss of Massachusetts, who has been three times elected to the present office by the Democratic party and who was supported as a candidate for president at the last Democratic national convention, denounces this bill as a sacrifice of the interests of the nation."

He has purchased a site in Canada for his large manufacturing establishment in Massachusetts and says he will remove his business there if this bill becomes a law.

The prosperity of the south, Senator Smoot declared, would be checked if the protective tariff was removed.

WALSH MEASURE MEETS DEFEAT

Bill Legalizing Saloons, Refused by Assembly.

CLOSED FROG SEASON WINS

Amendments to Spoof Act Concurred In—Saloon Assests Dealers Ship $150,000 Worth of Meat Annually—Extermination Is Near.

Madison.—The assembly has refused to permit the introduction of the Walsh bill, which would legalize nearly 1,000 liquor licenses in the state that have been declared illegal by a decision of the supreme court. Defeated in the senate, Assemblyman Walsh made an attempt to introduce the bill in the house. He said that there were 266 saloonkeepers in Milwaukee, who had been denied a saloon license under the court decision. He claimed that it was taking property away from innocent people. Assemblyman Potts, Alton, Frederick and Englebrecht, claimed that it would "cut the throats" of the dealers in the state. It requires a two-thirds vote to admit the bill and the Walsh motion failed by a vote of 50 to 53. Assemblyman J. Hedding of Milwaukee would permit to introduce a bill to have saloon licenses even though the licenses were issued under the court decision. This bill was defeated by a vote of 50 to 53.

Without a vote of opposition, the assembly concurred in the amendments to the Spoof frog bill, which makes the month of March and April a closed season. Spoof claimed that the dealers of frogs in Wisconsin annually shipped $150,000 of frog meat to the markets of Chicago and New York. He feared that the frog would be exterminated in Wisconsin, "unless a closed season was declared. The bill punishes by a fine of not less than $25 any person who shall catch frogs during the closed season."

The Walsh bill prohibiting the sale of meat agents from taking back the goods of the owner was given final passage and now goes to the governor. The assembly advanced the bill providing for a commission to investigate the advisability of erecting monuments on the battlefields of Gettysburg and Antietam. Assemblyman Rosacker moved indefinite postponement, saying the state had enough monuments. Assemblyman Jones championed the measure.

Joint concurrence was given to the bill providing for a commission to investigate the advisability of erecting monuments on the battlefields of Gettysburg and Antietam. Night Fair Rate Cut to 25 Cents.

The 1912 state fair will be open evenings.

Not only this, but for the evening the admission will be reduced to 25 cents.

This is the decision reached by the state board of agriculture and announced on Tuesday.

In past years the regular admission price of 50 cents has maintained, day and night. The board, however, has come to recognize that there are thousands of people who are unable to attend during the day and that it is impractical to ask those people to pay 50 cents for the privilege of three or four hours at the exposition, while those able to attend during the day may remain on the grounds for 15 hours at the same price.

This action particularly favors the laboring man, who will be able to attend the fair, there are many mechanics, clerks and laborers who will gladly spend one or two evenings on the grounds if they are able to attend with any degree of economy, as is now possible.

Every department will be open evenings until 10 o'clock with all clerks and demonstrators in attendance the same as during the day. The grounds will be well lighted and patrolled, so that the same advantage will obtain at night as during the day.

There will be given more special attention to the night. The big Cheyenne wild west show, with all its cowboys, cowgirls, Indians, outlaws, bronchos, steers and buffaloes, will offer as large and varied a program at night as during the day. All the horse show and special stock parades will take place at night.

WATSON STORY HIT

MULLHALL TELLS INVESTIGATORS HE MADE ERROR IN CHARGES AGAINST HIM.

FOUGHT ALBERT J. HOPKINS

Letters Tell of Illinois Senate Contest and Reveal New Lobby Branch—Worked for William R. McKinley and Others.

Washington, July 24.—Martin M. Mulhall, confessed lobbyist for the National Association of Manufacturers, retracted Tuesday morning charges he had made here in the senate investigating committee. He had sworn that former Representative James E. Watson of Indiana was employed by private interests in 1908 while a member of the house to work for a tariff commission bill. In retracting he said Watson was not a member of the house at the time.

Reports that Watson was about to ask the District of Columbia grand jury to indict Mulhall on a charge of criminal libel were heard meanwhile about the investigating room.

Mulhall volunteered his retraction. He said he realized his mistake when he saw the date of a tariff convention in Indianapolis in February, 1909.

More of the Mulhall letters were shared while the lobbyist was testifying. February 4, 1909, in a letter to F. C. Schweitzer, Mulhall gave the Illinois politics and brought in former Senator Hopkins, who was defeated for re-election by William Lorimer. Mulhall wrote of the senatorial deadlock at Springfield:

"We are spreading the impression that on account of the contemptible stand taken by Hopkins in the convention at Chicago last June, wherein he was extremely unfair to the manufacturing interests in refusing them a hearing before the committee on resolutions and picking that committee in favor of the Compens crowd, he has in a large measure brought this fight on his own shoulders."

The same letter referred to W. B. McKinley of Illinois, then a representative in congress as follows:

"There have been some votes cast for Mr. McKinley since the contest started, and Mr. Emery and I will see Mr. McKinley on this issue and try to gain his active influence for our people from this time on. He is extremely friendly at present and we are doing all we can to make this friendship much stronger."

The Emery to whom the witness referred was James A. Emery, described by Mulhall as "chief lobbyist" for the manufacturers' association.

A few days later Mulhall, in another letter to Schweitzer, denounced Mr. McKinley and others for voting to defeat the ship subsidy bill, which the manufacturers' association favored.

February 18, 1909, when the fight on Hopkins was hot, Mulhall wrote Emery that he had had a long conference on political matters with Edward Hines of Chicago, whose connection with the political welfare of Representative Jenkins of Wisconsin had been brought out before the committee, and that he took Hines to Mr. Emery's office to do some "confidential work," but was chagrined to find that he had been "used" and "sold" to Mr. Hines about the excellent service to be had there.

Another branch of the "insidious lobby" was disclosed late in the day. The Mulhall letters referred to efforts to have Cardinal Gibbons, Daniel I. Tuttle, presiding bishop of the Episcopal church of America, Ambassador James Bryce the late justice Brewer of the federal supreme court and other prominent men speak in St. Louis during a course of lectures given by the Citizens Industrial association.

Col. Martin M. Mulhall, testifying before the senate lobby investigating committee Monday, charged that James E. Watson of Indiana, when a member of congress, accepted money in payment for his services in behalf of a tariff bill.

Mulhall said that Representative Watson was the secret pay roll of the National Manufacturers' association and drew $250 a week, in addition to a lump sum of $500 paid him as a retainer.

The association, Mulhall testified, also promised Watson $10,000 in cash when the tariff commission bill was passed.

Martin M. Mulhall gave the senate lobby investigating committee his story Friday of alleged efforts in 1907-1908 to bribe Samuel Comer, president of the American Federation of Labor, to desert the cause of labor and support the policies advocated by the National Association of Manufacturers.

BRYAN OFFERS SENATORS TREATY MAKING U. S. RULER.

Secretary of State Urges That Arbitration Pacts With Several Nations Be Renewed.

Washington, July 22.—Secretary of State Bryan on Saturday laid before the senate committee on foreign relations a private conference a proposal to establish by treaty what amounts to an American protectorate over the republic of Nicaragua. Bryan proposes a protectorate similar to that now exercised over Cuba.

At the same conference Mr. Bryan urged renewal of arbitration treaties with France, Great Britain and other countries.

The secretary of state went before the committee with a revised draft of the proposed Nicaraguan treaty, negotiated first in the Taft administration, by which the United States would obtain exclusive canal rights across Nicaragua and a new naval base in exchange for a $3,000,000 gold payment.

Under the proposed plan Nicaragua would agree in substance:

That war should not be declared without the consent of the United States.

That no treaties should be made with foreign governments that would tend to destroy its independence or that would give those governments a foothold in the republic.

That no public debt would be contracted beyond the ordinary resources of the government, as indicated by the ordinary revenues.

That the United States should have the right to intervene at any time to preserve Nicaraguan independence or to protect life or property.

That the United States should have the exclusive right to build a canal across Nicaragua, and should have a 99-year lease to a naval base in the bay of Fonseca and to the Great Corn and Little Corn islands in the Caribbean seas, with the privilege of removing the base. The United States in return would pay Nicaragua $1,000,000 to be used in public works.

50 KILLED IN FIRE

MOST OF VICTIMS OF BINGHAMTON, N. Y., BLAZE ARE YOUNG GIRLS.

MANY JUMP TO EARTH

Terrific Burst of Flame Traps Tollers on Upper Floors of Building and Firemen Are Powerless to Save Them From Death.

Binghamton, N. Y., July 24.—Fifty-two persons, most of them women and girls, and all employed in the frame, under box factory of the Binghamton Clothing company, died in a fire which swept that building on Tuesday. Fifty more persons are injured, a dozen of them mortally.

In the city hospital and in private institutions are 39 injured.

Some two-score persons are known to have escaped as by miracles from the building, which burst into flame like a tinderbox and became a roaring furnace in a short time after the first alarm was sounded. About 125 persons were in the factory when the fire broke out. Those unaccounted for, or most of them, are believed to be in the red-hot ruins of the structure.

Around the scene of the disaster, the greatest city has ever known, thousands watched the workers in the glare of three big searchlights, many in the great thing being restrained only by the closely drawn police from rushing into the ruins to seek the bodies of relatives or friends.

After the first fierce blast the fire seemed to burst from every other part of the building at once. Upon the escapees grim, women and men, were clustered and inside others were waiting to get out the iron ladders. But the flames were too quick for them.

When the firemen arrived in response to the telephone alarm, they were unable to get into the burning building and the ends of the stream from their hoses were turned into steam without effect upon the fire. The life nets and extension ladders of the firemen were equally useless. There was but one chance for those caught on the upper floors, except the last resort, to jump, and this many took, while others fell, shriveled and crumpled with the heat.

Scarcely one of the survivors was able to give a connected account of what took place on the upper floors of the factory when the employees there, mostly women and girls, realized that the fire call was no false alarm and that death was sweeping upon them.

The fire escapes were not large enough to hold all who rushed madly to the exits and there was a dash for the windows. The trapped victims screaming with pain as the flames swept upon them from behind and seared their bodies.

Then from windows and fire escapes bodies began dropping. They fell thick and fast. The building was only four stories high, and many who jumped even from the topmost floor escaped with their lives, although most of them were badly maimed. It was on the fourth floor that most of the firemen and operators were working, and it was among these that death and injury were greatest.

The total money damage is not expected to exceed $100,000.

WON'T CUT LIVING EXPENSES, SAYS BURTON OF OHIO.

Senator Smoot of Utah Quotes From Wilson's Book in Denouncing the Measure.

Washington, July 23.—The Underwood-Simmons tariff bill continues to be attacked by Republican senators. Senator Burton of Ohio, expressing the assurance that it would fail in its purpose to reduce the cost of living and Senator Smoot of Utah, in an address Monday branding it as "the most injurious tariff measure ever taken up for consideration by congress."

"This bill," said Senator Smoot, "is a partisan and sectional measure, the outcome of secret caucus methods such as never ruled before in the senate of the United States."

In his book, "The New Freedom," President Wilson says that there is no excuse for causing in congress, and in a speech in Indiana preceding his election he emphasized that point by asserting that there was no necessity for secrecy in congressional proceedings. Yet not in the history of congress has there been anything equal to that record in the way of dark methods in the preparation of a tariff bill.

Governor Foss of Massachusetts, who has been three times elected to his present office by the Democratic party and who was supported as a candidate for president at the last Democratic national convention, denounces this bill as a sacrifice of the interests of the nation. He has purchased a site in Canada for his large manufacturing establishment in Massachusetts and says he will remove his business there if his bill becomes a law.

The property of the south, Senator Smoot declared, would be checked if the protective tariff was removed.

Washington, July 23.—Reports of conditions surrounding the Huerta government in Mexico have put the officials in an attitude of keenest apprehension toward the situation there. Advice which officials believe to be perfectly trustworthy, seem to indicate that the strife between the Huerta regime and the revolutionary elements is nearing a point where some definite conclusion is to be reached.

Reports of an impending collapse of the Huerta regime are being talked over freely in official circles, though no official of the administration will permit his name to be coupled with them. All information made public was with the exact stipulation that it should not be represented as reflecting the views of the administration.

WALSH MEASURE MEETS DEFEAT

Bill Legalizing Saloons Refused by Assembly.

CLOSED FROG SEASON WINS

Amendments to Spoof Act Concurred In—Solon Assents Dealers Ship $150,000 Worth of Meat Annually—Extermination Is Near.

Madison.—The assembly has refused to permit the introduction of the Walsh bill, which would legalize nearly 1,000 liquor licenses in the state that have been declared illegal by a decision of the supreme court. Defeated in the senate, Assemblyman Walsh made an attempt to introduce the bill in the house. He had the support of 206 saloonkeepers in Milwaukee who had been denied a saloon license under the court decision. He claimed that it was taking property away from innocent people. Assemblyman Potts, Allison, Frederick and Engelbrecht claimed that it would "set the provisions of the Baker law back six years." It requires a two-thirds vote to admit the bill and the Walsh motion failed by a vote of 50 to 25.

The Walsh bill also would permit certain hotels to have saloon licenses even though the licenses were in excess of the number permitted under the Baker law. This bill likewise failed to obtain the required two-thirds.

Without a vote of opposition, the assembly concurred in the amendments to the Spoof frog bill, which makes the months of April and May a closed season.

The dealers of frogs in Wisconsin annually shipped $150,000 of frog meat to the markets of Chicago and New York. He feared that the frog would be exterminated in Wisconsin, "as the snake had been from Ireland," unless a closed season was declared. The bill punishes by a fine of not less than $25 any person who shall catch frogs during the closed season.

The Walsh bill prohibiting installment agents from taking back the goods of the purchaser without the consent of the owner was given final passage and now goes to the governor.

The assembly advanced the bill providing for a commission to investigate the advisability of erecting monuments on the battlefields of Gettysburg and Antietam. Assemblyman Rossler moved indefinitely postponement, saying the state had erected a sufficient number of monuments.

Final concurrence was given to the Peavey bill increasing the powers of the board of health and increasing the state appropriation to $40,000 annually.

On motion of Assemblyman Axel Johnson, his bill, which would permit the "Bull Moose" party to get a place on the primary and general election ballots, was sent back to the senate.

This was the bill which was killed in the senate two weeks ago and in favor of which Governor McGovern sent a special message to the senate asking them to reconsider the vote and pass the bill in order to redeem a platform pledge.

The senate lifted the call of the house and by a vote of 17 to 13 killed the bill providing for one day's rest in seven for employees. Senator Skogmo offered a substitute that would permit the industrial commission to make reasonable exemptions. It was defeated.

Senator Skogmo said that the bill would be a political issue in the next campaign. He called attention to the fact that the measure had the endorsement of labor. Senator Hustung said that it was more important to consider the manhood of the state than the manhood of the legislature. The bill was opposed by Senator Teasdale, who said there was no call for such legislation.

If you are having cold feet on any of your building plans that you talked about in the Spring, come in and see the boss and swap a few of your troubles for some of his. He can match you on anything in the trouble line, but his long suit is to convert troubles into bubbles and blow them off your map. If you ever catch him with a grouch it's not caused by frigid troubles but just because we can't always get enough good flooring or something in the timber line to fill our orders. That doesn't happen often, but it will sometimes in spite of everything. You know this town is not standing still. She is "going some" and that's no Arabian Night's fairy tale.

NEKOOSA

(From the Nekosia Times)

The White City band of Port Edwards last Thursday evening, fulfilled its promise to give our people a first class, interesting concert. For about two hours the Port Edwards boys delighted the large crowd with many numbers of the best music we have heard in a long time. Each member rendered his part in masterful style and they had the good fortune to secure for instructor Prof. Ellis, of Grand Rapids, who understands his duties if a man ever did. He is a thorough musician, a perfect gentleman and handles his men in such a manner as to get all there is in them out. Our people all hope this was but the beginning of many such concerts.

Negotiations have been in progress for some time between Edgar Youngchild and F. X. Grode. Last Saturday they were concluded, and Mr. Grode is now the owner and proprietor of the barber shop that Edgar purchased of him about two years ago and has since conducted. After selling his business to Mr. Youngchild two years ago, as stated, Mr. Grode represented a wholesale barbers, supply house on the road in the interim, but during this, the old longing to return to the best town on earth outweighed everything else, and he is here.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Richmond were guests at the Lacy Horton home, in Grand Rapids, Sunday. They went up to view the little Miss Margaret Horton, the first grandchild to arrive in the Richmond family. If you think the grandparents are not proud of it you should think again. The little Miss has probably made many mashes thus early in life, but the greatest of these is on grandpa and grandma.

A number of our citizens who are lovers of outdoor sports, especially lawn tennis, have erected a handsome court near the river bank in the paper company lawn, on which some one is playing nearly every hour in the day. As one gentleman expressed it to us, nobody knows how we people who are shut up in a close office all day appreciate this sport and exercise. Long live the tennis court.

Among the season's dramatic successes, "A Girl of the Underworld" stands out prominently. The play is one of intense interest, dealing with a new phase of life in a great city. The date will be Tuesday, August 5th at Daly's Theater.

John Fogarty, wife and children, of Green Bay, drove down in their car and spent Saturday as guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Galligan. Mr. Fogarty was a former superintendent of the Nekosia-Edwards paper mill, here, and has many friends in Nekosia and vicinity, who were glad to see him.

Fatten Your Farm.

A well known writer in a recent issue of Farm and Fireside writes: "A tendency exists among many farmers to burn all cornstalks, loose straw, clover-chaff and superfluous roughage about the place. But it is too expensive."

"Every time an acre of stalks is burned twenty-one pounds of nitrogen goes into the air and will cost you $3.50 to buy back again. Wheat or oats straw from an acre contains about twelve to fourteen pounds of nitrogen, and clover-chaff three times this amount."

"One can easily figure from these deductions what a reckless loss to the farm is a fire that chaff-pile or stalks. The cut-aways and disk harrows will chop these bulky materials up ready for the plow where they can be turned under. If you want to fatten the old farm, stuff it with organic matter."

AS IT IS TODAY.

Mary had a little lamb.

It is a tender lamb, white as snow—
The circumstances were not quite what they were long ago.

When Mary was a poor young maid
And lambs were very cheap—
Since then you know how meat has risen
By speedy bound and leap.

The olden Mary went to school
And took the lamb along.
For lambs those days were only pets—
They bought them for a song.

The modern Mary viewed her lamb
Much as a bank account;
She knew it would be valued at
A very large amount.

Because she had the little lamb
She was a famous girl;
The other ladies followed her
In hat and dress and curl.

The papers pictured her each day
And rather wildly guessed
At what might be the total worth
Of the lamb she possessed.

She sold the lamb as chops and such,
Then bought a railroad line,
A country place, a city home
And jewels fair and fine.

She went abroad and met a duke—
A dutchess now is she
And is restoring castles old,
As happy as can be.

"Will you have a cereal for your breakfast?" asked the waitress.
"A cereal? No, thank you," replied the witty guest. "I should prefer some short stories."

Whereupon she brought him some lamb's tails.

TAKE EFFECT AUGUST 15.

Cut in Parcel Post Rates Made by the Department.

Washington, July 25.—Despite senatorial criticism of the proposed reduction in parcel post rates and the increase in the size of the packages, Postmaster Gen. Burleson today announced he would issue the final orders at once putting the changes into effect, Aug. 15. The announcement came after the wisdom of making the changes had been subjected to a searching review before the senate postoffice committee in the presence of the postmaster general.

Chairman Clark of the interstate commerce commission, explaining why the commission had sanctioned the proposed changes, said he believed the postmaster general had ample power under the law to make the changes.

"I am convinced that the postoffice ought to, and will extend the parcel post until it will carry all packages up to 100 pounds," he added.

GRAND CHAUTAUQUA EXTRAVAGANZA

Tolomeo's Royal Italian Band and Grand Opera Company.

TO APPEAR THE FIFTH DAY

It will be a pleasure to our people to learn that we are so fortunate as to have on our Chautauqua this year, no less an organization than Tolomeo's Royal Italian Band and Grand Opera Quartet. This great band is under the exclusive management, this summer, of the Jeffers-Wick Chautauqua system. It is only through this system that we are able to secure this noted band and opera company for the grand festive day of our Chautauqua.

Signor Tolomeo, who is from the Royal Conservatory of Italy, has gathered about him a group of real artists. In the afternoon they will give a popular concert, and in the evening they are scheduled to give a condensed production of Giuseppe Verdi's great opera composition, "Il Trovatore." This unusual offering should be enjoyed by all our people, for it is the most magnificent play ever staged with music. We are given full assurance that the Grand Opera Quartet, which accompanies the Royal Italian Band, is composed of the very best artists to be found.

TEN thousand dollars a year! Neil Kirtrell left the office of the Morning Telegraph in a daze. He was insensible of the raw February air, heedless of sloppy pavements; the gray day had suddenly turned gold. He could not realize it all at once; he thought of his and Edith's heart swelled with love of Edith; she had sacrificed so much to become the wife of a man who had tried to make an artist of himself, and of whom fate, or economic determinism, or something, had made a cartoonist. What a surprise for her! He must marry home.

In the swelling of his heart he felt a love not only of Edith but of the whole world. The people he met seemed dear to him; he felt friendly with every one, and beamed on perfect strangers with broad, cheerful smiles. He stopped to buy some flowers for his mother, and a young woman, who had been spring, took the daffodils, because the girl said:

"I think yellow is such a spiritual color, don't you?" and inclined her head in a most artistic manner.

But daffodils, after all, which would have been much the day before, seemed insufficient in the light of new prosperity, and Kirtrell bought a large azalea, beaming in its graceful spread of pink blossoms.

"Where shall I send it?" asked the girl, whose cheeks were as pink as azaleas themselves.

"I think I'll call a cab and take it to her myself," said Kirtrell.

And she sighed over the romance of this rich young gentleman and the girl of the azaleas, who, no doubt, was as beautiful as the young woman who was playing Lottie, the Poor Saleslady at the Lyceum that very week.

Kirtrell and the azalea howled along Claybourne avenue; he leaned back on the cushions, and adopted the expression of gaudy appropriateness to that thoroughfare. Would Edith now prefer Claybourne Avenue? With ten thousand a year they could, perhaps—and yet, at first it would be best not to put on airs, but to go right on as they were, in the flat. Then the thought came to him that now, as the cartoonist on the Telegraph, his name would become as well known in Claybourne Avenue as it had been in the homes of the poor and humble during his years on the Post. And his heart flew to those homes where tired men at evening looked for his cartoons and children laughed at his funny pictures. It gave him a pang; he had felt a subtle bond between himself and all those thousands who read the Post. It was hard to leave them. The Post might be yellow, but, as the girl had said, yellow was a spiritual color, and the Post brought something into their lives—lives that were scorned by the Telegraph and by these people on the avenue. Could he make new friends here, where the cartoons he drew and the Post that printed them had been continued, if not despised? His mind flew back to the dingy office of the Post, to the boys there, the whole good-natured, happy-go-lucky gang; and to Hardy—ah, Hardy—who had been so good to him, and given him his big chance, had taken such pains and interest, helping him with ideas and suggestions, criticism and sympathy. To tell Hardy that he was going to leave him, here on the eve of the campaign—would he have to tell him, too—oh, the devil! Why must he think of these things now?

After all, when he had reached home, and had run upstairs with the news and the azaleas, Edith did not seem delighted.

"But, dearie, business is business," he argued, "and we need the money!"

"Yes, I know; doubtless you're right. Only, my dear, 'business' is business. It isn't like you, and—"

"But think what it will mean—ten thousand a year!"

"Oh, Neil, I've lived on ten thousand a year before, and I never had half the fun that I had when we were getting along on twelve hundred."

"Yes, but then we were always dreaming of the day when I'd make a lot; we lived on that hope, didn't we?" Edith laughed. "You used to say we lived on love."

"You're not serious." He turned to gaze moodily out of the window. And then she left the azaleas, and perched on the flat arm of his chair.

"Dearest," she said, "I am serious. I know all this means to you. We're human, and we don't like to 'chip at crabs like Hindus,' even for the sake of youth and art. I never had illusions about love in a cottage and all that. Only, dear, I have been happy, so very happy, with you, because—well, because I was living in an atmosphere of honest purpose, honest ambition, and honest desire to do some good thing in the world. I had never known such an atmosphere before. At home, you know, father and Uncle James and the boys—well, it was all money, money, money with them, and they couldn't understand why I—"

"Could marry a poor newspaper artist? That's just the point!"

See put her hand to his lips.

"Now don't! If they couldn't understand, so much the worse for them. If they thought it meant sacrifice to me, they were mistaken. I have been happy in this flat; only—she leaned back and inclined her head with her eyes averted—"only the paper in this room is atrocious; it's a typical landlady's selection—McGraw picked it out. You see what it means to be merely rich."

She was so pretty that she kissed her, and then she went on:

"And so, dear, if I didn't seem to be as impressed and delighted as you are thinking of me, it is because I am. I am happy of Mr. Hardy and the poor, dear, common little Post, and then—"

ing to do. Just like Dick Jennings, who was a re-bought free-trader and used to write free-trade editorials for the Times—he went over to the Telegraph you remember, and writes all those protection arguments."

The mayor did not seem to be interested in Dick Jennings, or in the whims of his profession, or in the whims of his profession.

"Of course, you know I'm for you. Mr. Clayton, just exactly as I've always been. I'm going to vote for you."

This did not seem to interest the mayor, either.

"And, maybe you know—I thought, perhaps," he snatched at this bright new idea that had come to him just in the nick of time, "that I might help you by my cartoons in the Telegraph; that is, I might keep them from being as bad as they might—"

"But that wouldn't be dealing fairly with your new employers, Neil," the mayor said.

Kirtrell was making more and more a mess of this whole miserable business, and he was basely glad when they reached the corner.

"Well, good-by, my boy," said the mayor, as they parted. "Remember me to the little woman."

Kirtrell watched him as he went on down the avenue, swinging along in his free way, the broad felt hat he wore riding above all the other hats in the throng that filled the sidewalk; and Kirtrell sighed in deep depression.

When he turned in his cartoon, Benson scanned it a moment, cocked his head this side and that, puffed his briar pipe, and finally said:

"I'm afraid this is hardly up to you. This figure of Clayton, here—it hasn't got the stuff in it. You want to know as he is. We want the people to know what a four-flushing, hypocritical, dishonest, bathwater-like he is—with all his rot about the people and their damned rights!"

Benson was all unconscious of the

"The dear, heartful soul!" she exclaimed softly. "Neil, it is wonderful. It is not a cartoon; it is a portrait. It shows what you might do with a brush."

Kirtrell could not speak, and he turned the drawing back to the wall.

Kirtrell found the task of telling Hardy just as difficult as he expected it to be, but by some mercy it did not prove too long. Explanation had not been necessary; he had only to make the first hesitating approaches, and Hardy understood. Hardy was, in a way, hurt; Kirtrell saw that, and rushed to his own defense:

"I hate to go, old man. I don't like it a little bit—but, you know, business is business, and we need the money."

He even tried to laugh as he advanced this last conciliatory reason, and Hardy, for all he showed in voice or phrase, may have agreed with him.

"It's all right, Kirt," he said. "I'm sorry; I wish we could pay you more, but—well, good luck."

That was all. Kirtrell gathered up the few articles he had at the office, gave Nolan his sketch, bade the boys good-by—bade them good-by as if he were going on a long journey, never to see them more—and then he went.

After he had made the break it did not seem so bad as he had anticipated. At first things went on smoothly enough. The campaign had not opened, and he was free to exercise his talents outside the political field. He drew cartoons dealing with banal subjects, touching with the gentle satire of his humorous pencil; fables which all the world agreed about, and let vital questions alone. And he and Edith enjoyed themselves; indulged in things they loved; went more frequently to the theater; appeared at receptions, dined now and then downtown. They began to realize certain desires they had not known for a long time—some he himself had never known, some that Edith had not known since she left her father's home to become his bride.

But March came, and the politicians began to bluster like the season. Late one afternoon he was on his way to the office with a cartoon, the first in which he had seriously to attack Clayton. Benson, the managing editor of the Telegraph, had conceived it, and Kirtrell had worked on it that day in sickness of heart. Every living line of this new presentation of Clayton had cut him like some biting acid; but he had worked on, trying to reassure himself with the argument that he was a mere agent, devoid of personal responsibility. But it had been hard, and then Edith, when her husband had asked to see it, he had said:

"Oh, you don't want to see it; it's no good."

"Is it of him?" she had asked.

And when he nodded she had gone away without another word. Now, as he hurried through the crowded streets, he was conscious that it was no good, indeed; and he was divided between the artist's regret and the friend's joy in the fact. But it made him tremble. Was his hand to forget his cunning? And then, suddenly, he heard a familiar voice, and there beside him, with his hand on his shoulder, stood the mayor.

"Why, Neil, my boy, how are you?" he said, and he took Kirtrell's hand as warmly as ever. For a moment Kirtrell was relieved, and then his heart sank; for he had a quick realization that it was the coward within him that felt the relief, and the man the sickness. If Clayton had reproached him, or cut him, it would have made it easier; but Clayton did none of these things, and Kirtrell was irresistibly drawn to the subject himself.

"You heard of my new job?" he asked.

"Yes," said Clayton, "I heard."

"Well," Kirtrell began.

"So well," Clayton said.

"But I felt it well, a duty, some way—to Edith. You know—well—need the money?" And he gave the cynical laugh that went with the argument.

"What does she think? Does she feel that way about it?"

Kirtrell laughed, not critically now, but uneasily and with embarrassment, for Clayton's blue eyes were on him, those eyes that could look into men and understand them so.

"Of course you know," Kirtrell went on nervously, "there is nothing personal in this. We newspaper fellows simply do what we are told; we obey orders like soldiers, you know. With the policy of the paper we have nothing to do. Just like Dick Jennings, who was a re-bought free-trader and used to write free-trade editorials for the Times—he went over to the Telegraph you remember, and writes all those protection arguments."

That was all. Kirtrell gathered up the few articles he had at the office, gave Nolan his sketch, bade the boys good-by—bade them good-by as if he were going on a long journey, never to see them more—and then he went.

After he had made the break it did not seem so bad as he had anticipated. At first things went on smoothly enough. The campaign had not opened, and he was free to exercise his talents outside the political field. He drew cartoons dealing with banal subjects, touching with the gentle satire of his humorous pencil; fables which all the world agreed about, and let vital questions alone. And he and Edith enjoyed themselves; indulged in things they loved; went more frequently to the theater; appeared at receptions, dined now and then downtown. They began to realize certain desires they had not known for a long time—some he himself had never known, some that Edith had not known since she left her father's home to become his bride.

But March came, and the politicians began to bluster like the season. Late one afternoon he was on his way to the office with a cartoon, the first in which he had seriously to attack Clayton. Benson, the managing editor of the Telegraph, had conceived it, and Kirtrell had worked on it that day in sickness of heart. Every living line of this new presentation of Clayton had cut him like some biting acid; but he had worked on, trying to reassure himself with the argument that he was a mere agent, devoid of personal responsibility. But it had been hard, and then Edith, when her husband had asked to see it, he had said:

"Oh, you don't want to see it; it's no good."

"Is it of him?" she had asked.

And when he nodded she had gone away without another word. Now, as he hurried through the crowded streets, he was conscious that it was no good, indeed; and he was divided between the artist's regret and the friend's joy in the fact. But it made him tremble. Was his hand to forget his cunning? And then, suddenly, he heard a familiar voice, and there beside him, with his hand on his shoulder, stood the mayor.

"Why, Neil, my boy, how are you?" he said, and he took Kirtrell's hand as warmly as ever. For a moment Kirtrell was relieved, and then his heart sank; for he had a quick realization that it was the coward within him that felt the relief, and the man the sickness. If Clayton had reproached him, or cut him, it would have made it easier; but Clayton did none of these things, and Kirtrell was irresistibly drawn to the subject himself.

"You heard of my new job?" he asked.

"Yes," said Clayton, "I heard."

"Well," Kirtrell began.

"So well," Clayton said.

"But I felt it well, a duty, some way—to Edith. You know—well—need the money?" And he gave the cynical laugh that went with the argument.

"What does she think? Does she feel that way about it?"

Kirtrell laughed, not critically now, but uneasily and with embarrassment, for Clayton's blue eyes were on him, those eyes that could look into men and understand them so.

"Of course you know," Kirtrell went on nervously, "there is nothing personal in this. We newspaper fellows simply do what we are told; we obey orders like soldiers, you know. With the policy of the paper we have nothing to do. Just like Dick Jennings, who was a re-bought free-trader and used to write free-trade editorials for the Times—he went over to the Telegraph you remember, and writes all those protection arguments."

The mayor did not seem to be interested in Dick Jennings, or in the whims of his profession, or in the whims of his profession.

"Of course, you know I'm for you. Mr. Clayton, just exactly as I've always been. I'm going to vote for you."

This did not seem to interest the mayor, either.

"And, maybe you know—I thought, perhaps," he snatched at this bright new idea that had come to him just in the nick of time, "that I might help you by my cartoons in the Telegraph; that is, I might keep them from being as bad as they might—"

"But that wouldn't be dealing fairly with your new employers, Neil," the mayor said.

Kirtrell was making more and more a mess of this whole miserable business, and he was basely glad when they reached the corner.

"Well, good-by, my boy," said the mayor, as they parted. "Remember me to the little woman."

Kirtrell watched him as he went on down the avenue, swinging along in his free way, the broad felt hat he wore riding above all the other hats in the throng that filled the sidewalk; and Kirtrell sighed in deep depression.

When he turned in his cartoon, Benson scanned it a moment, cocked his head this side and that, puffed his briar pipe, and finally said:

"I'm afraid this is hardly up to you. This figure of Clayton, here—it hasn't got the stuff in it. You want to know as he is. We want the people to know what a four-flushing, hypocritical, dishonest, bathwater-like he is—with all his rot about the people and their damned rights!"

Benson was all unconscious of the

Kirtrell could not speak, and he turned the drawing back to the wall.

Kirtrell found the task of telling Hardy just as difficult as he expected it to be, but by some mercy it did not prove too long. Explanation had not been necessary; he had only to make the first hesitating approaches, and Hardy understood. Hardy was, in a way, hurt; Kirtrell saw that, and rushed to his own defense:

"I hate to go, old man. I don't like it a little bit—but, you know, business is business, and we need the money."

He even tried to laugh as he advanced this last conciliatory reason, and Hardy, for all he showed in voice or phrase, may have agreed with him.

"It's all right, Kirt," he said. "I'm sorry; I wish we could pay you more, but—well, good luck."

That was all. Kirtrell gathered up the few articles he had at the office, gave Nolan his sketch, bade the boys good-by—bade them good-by as if he were going on a long journey, never to see them more—and then he went.

James Kerr, probably the oldest printer in the state of Wisconsin, died at his home in Green Bay on Saturday, July 19th. Mr. Kerr started in the printing business in 1844, and had been at the business ever since until he was incapacitated about three years ago by a fall, which resulted in paralysis. He published the Green Bay Review for a number of years, having gone into the business at Port Howard, now a part of Green Bay, in 1877, and has since been located there. Mr. Kerr was 83 years of age at the time of his death.
There is one variety of the genus homo who, like the North American passenger pigeon, is rapidly becoming extinct. We refer to the tramp printer. There was a time, not so many years ago, when every few weeks one of these knights of the road would blow in and strike the boss for a job, and if he was successful in securing work he would turn to and make things move in a manner that was of a wonder to the "devil" and some of the other members of the force. These tramp printers visited large towns and small ones and their wanderings often carried them over the entire country, and it was impossible to mention a town that they had not visited. They often had a vivid imagination and this helped them out in describing their wanderings. But the age of invention has placed its mark on the journeyman printer and he has receded before its onward march until he is seldom seen in the haunts of man. One visited Grand Rapids recently and asked for work. As he did not look as if he worked particularly for work we went to the trouble of securing him a job. He explained that he did not care particularly for a steady job; just wanted something to help out for a few days. He demonstrated by his actions that it was not a steady job that he was after, for he put in about a week and then filled up on poor whiskey, got insulted by somebody and left the town in a huff. It doesn't take much to offend one of these gentlemen, notwithstanding the fact that they may be wearing clothes that they could only be handled by a pair of tongs.

EXPECT FAST TIME
Motor Boats to Race at Keokuk in Latter Part of August.
Commodore J. Stuart Blackton of the Motor Boat Club of America, whose "Baby Reliance 111" broke all existing world's records at the annual regatta of the Mississippi Valley Power Boat Association at Davenport, last summer, has notified Chairman Charles P. Hanley of the racing committee that he will send two new "Reliances" to the Association's races which will be held this year at Keokuk, Iowa, August 26, 27 and 28.

This means that the Mississippi Valley will again set up a world record for high speed power boats. Commodore Blackton has had experts working ever since last year on a boat that would pass the 50-mile-an-hour mark. Whether this will be accomplished, remains to be proven, but it seems certain that it will. For last year's "Baby Reliance" slid over the bow at 53.5 miles, nearly 10 miles faster than any previous record.

There is prospect of the keenest rivalry for championship honors at Keokuk next month. Commodore James A. Pugh of Chicago, has wired the committee that he will be at the starting line with "Disturber 111," the big 40-foot droplines which has 700 horse power stored in 24 cylinders. This is the largest power plant ever packed in an American racing hull. Last season "Disturber" was too powerful for her fittings; something was constantly wrong. Commodore Pugh has had two experts at work on her since last fall. In trials in Chicago harbor she is said to have made better than 55 miles an hour. This would seem to insure an epoch making race at Keokuk, where the new thirty mile lake, created by the $27,000,000 power dam, is said to form the finest race course in America.

Pa's Oldfashioned Taste.
Her mother was a bashful thing, Oh how I loved her when she'd sing "On the other side of Jordan, In the sweet fields of Eden, There is rest for me weary, And there's rest for you, Will sing this grand old hymn for you: "Oh, you kid, it's a bear, Cuddle up, kiss me quick, Hold me tight, you're a bear, That's the language Smearcase rag." —Cincinnati Enquirer.

PAIDON OF DIETZ SOUGHT.
Would Have to Serve Sixteen Years to Have Parole Considered.
Wausau, Wis., July 25.—John Dietz, defender of Cameron Dam, must serve sixteen years and three months of his life sentence on a murder charge before a petition for parole can be considered, according to members of the state board of control which was in session at the prison last week.

Members of the Dietz family, on lecture tours throughout the state have circulated numerous petitions for the pardon of Dietz and which have been sent to the governor. As the result of the statements made by the members of the state board of control, it is probable that attempts to secure a parole for the Cameron Dam defender will be abandoned and instead an attempt made to secure Dietz's release from the penitentiary through a pardon from the governor.

Ambition.
Let others work and lose their health In piling up the sordid wealth, But that is not my wish. Let others burn the midnight oils, Devising ways of grabbing spoils; I'd rather sit and fish.
Let others solve the problems great, Affecting the affairs of state; None of that on my dish. Let others hew the nation's path And bear the thankless public's wrath, I'd rather sit and fish.
Let others lead the strenuous life That's full of worry, toil and strife, And that's not my ambition. Let others wear their lives away, By living five years every day; I'd rather sit and fish.

Safety in Lightning Storm.
Every year quite a large number of people are killed by lightning because they did not know what to do in a lightning storm.
First of all, you are safer indoors than out. Most people get killed out in the open. If you are caught in a thunder storm, then don't be afraid of sheltering under a tree, because you have heard that it is dangerous.
It is dangerous to shelter under a single tree, because lightning likes to strike the highest point, and a solitary tree is the highest point as a rule for some distance around. But you are pretty safe if you take shelter in a wood. A tree in a wood is seldom struck.
Certain trees are more dangerous than others. If you have a choice between an oak and a beech, take the beech tree, all the time. A far greater number of oak trees are struck than beech trees. Elm trees are nearly as dangerous as oak trees. Avoid big crowds and collections of animals. For some reason—probably because of the warmth that rises from their bodies—crowds of animals and persons are liable to be struck by lightning.

In the Laundry.
If one teaspoonful of peroxide of hydrogen is added to half a tub of water in which white clothes are rinsed the result will be an agreeable surprise. It acts as the best bleaching agent known, for it gives a pure white color without any damage to the fabric. This may be applied to silk and wool as well as linen.

NOTICE TO TRIBUNE SUBSCRIBERS.
The new Postmaster General has notified all country newspapers that the ruling of the department as to delinquent subscriptions must be complied with and blanks have recently been furnished the papers on which to make a report as to the condition of their mailing list. From now on weekly newspapers will not be permitted the second class mailing privilege on papers which are more than a year behind in account. This means that the weekly newspapers will necessarily have to remove many names from their lists as most publishers have subscribers who are more than a year in arrears. The Tribune is no exception to this rule and neither will it be an exception as to the mailing privilege. We must comply with the law and to do so must remove from our list those who are in arrears for the paper more than one year. Bills will be mailed shortly to all who are in arrears and we hope there will be prompt response for we desire to retain all of our present subscribers. We would regret very much to lose any of our old friends, just because they are a year or more behind, when we know they intend to pay, but the postal laws are mandatory and we cannot oppose them. Therefore if you do not pay after receiving your notice of arrears and do not receive your paper within a few weeks thereafter do not blame the publisher. We are doing our best to give you a clean, carefully edited local paper, and we hope you appreciate what we have done and are trying to do for the city and county sufficiently to square up and remain with us. Under the postal laws newspapers are supposed to be paid for in advance, if not but one year's credit can be extended. The Tribune publishers will conform to the law even though it may eventually mean a big decrease in our subscription list. If you cannot pay up your arrears at once, a letter promising payment and an order authorizing the continuance of the paper will be accepted by the post office department as significant of good faith on your part and under such order we will be permitted to carry you for a while and continue the paper. This is a question of importance and we hope every one of our subscribers will give it the proper attention.

WASH YOUR MONEY.
Uncle Sam Can do the Trick While You Wait.
Behind a wire screened cage employees of the United States government have now gone into the laundry business. They are washing United States bank notes and ironing them. It is not generally understood that when anybody gets old greenbacks, it does not matter whether a dollar or a thousand, if he sent it to the treasury department and requested a new bill he would have to wait it. All the bankers in the country have always had the right to turn in old money and get new for it. The old money was assorted, counted and tied in packages in the treasury department and then taken to a big cycle machine, where great holes were cut thru the bundles of money, and from there it was sent to a mangle, where it was chewed up into fine pulp and then moulded to make trinkets for sale. They are not a bit pretty, being a nasty greenish gray, and are nearly always warped out of shape, but they sell them for souvenirs, as there is a kind of fascination in knowing that the tiny imitation of the Washington monument which you hold in your hand represents $20,000.

The washing machine is still in an experimental stage, it is said, and seems to be doing pretty good work. It is estimated that this will save a vast sum for the treasury. It costs $13.30 to make 1000 bank notes. It costs but 50 cents to rejuvenate the same number.

The machine is 15 feet long and five feet wide, and looks something like a newspaper printing press. It has dozens of rolls, many gears and operates with the same clank and clang. The money is placed between two canvas belts at one end of the machine. It runs thru a solution of laundry soap and boiling hot water, where it is thoroughly cleaned. It then enters another vat, in which there is a solution of stiffening material and germ-killing solution. From this vat it is drawn between a gas heated mangle, where it is ironed.

It emerges from the machine two minutes and 15 seconds after it has started on its 64 foot trip, and is to all intents and purposes a perfect bill. When running at full speed the washing machine can wash about 4,000 bills an hour.

ARE YOU A SKEPTIC?
DO YOU DISBELIEVE BECAUSE YOU THOROUGHLY UNDERSTAND HOW MY ORIGINAL CHIROPRACTIC METHODS REMOVE THE CAUSE OF DISEASE?
I have removed the cause of chronic headaches with 4 adjustments.
I have cured ulcers of the stomach with 12 adjustments.
I have removed the cause of appendicitis with 3 adjustments.
I have removed all traces of rheumatism with 7 adjustments.
These are either most wonderful truths or they must be phenomenal lies.
TRUTHS OR LIES, they are worth your consideration.
If you are a sufferer, call at my office and allow me to prove my statements. Let me refer you to people in this city who have known me since permanently opening an office two years ago; people who have been at my office and have taken the spinal adjustments and were restored to health, after having tried the many different old fashioned ways of treating the effects and symptoms instead of going to the cause.
You are the sufferer; I have the knowledge and ability to handle your case in a most scientific and accurate manner.
Consider and investigate.
Find out about my methods, my prices they are reasonable.
Are you tired of experimenting with your ailments, then you should take spinal adjustments and have the cause removed and be restored to health. You are the loser by delaying the opportunity of not becoming more acquainted.

Abstracts of Title
But few Real Estate titles are without error. Some errors occur in the careless drawing of Deeds, Mortgages and other transfer papers; other errors occur because those drawing papers are human and subject to making occasional errors. Others occur in the proceedings necessary under the foreclosure of Mortgages or through the sale of the interests of minor children and incompetent persons. Occasionally a property-holder pays taxes by mistake upon another's property and his own being returned delinquent, is sold for taxes.
There are so many dozens of ways that errors may occur in the transfer of land titles that the only safe and sensible course is to procure an Abstract of Title to any land you are about to buy or upon which you are to loan money.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Varney, wife of a Confederate general, has lost one son and another is dying from wounds. She reluctantly gives her consent for Wilfred, the youngest, to join the army if his father consents. The father, a Confederate general, is in an effort to capture Richmond. In an effort to capture Richmond, Davis a Varney secures from President Davis a commission for Capt. Thorne, who is just recovering from wounds, as chief of the telegraph at Richmond. Capt. Thorne declares he must not go and tells the father that he is not a Confederate. The father is angry and tells the father that he is not a Confederate.

CHAPTER IV.

Miss Captains Intervention.

The captain started after her departure, and he listened to her footfalls in the stairs, and then came to an instant resolution. He would take advantage of her opportunity withdrawal. He turned back to the table, soiled his hat, and started for the door, only to come face to face with another charming young woman, who stood breathless before him to his great and ill-concealed annoyance. Yet the newcomer was pretty enough and young enough and sweet enough to give any man pause for the sheer pleasure of looking at her, to say nothing of spending to her.

"The resources of an ancient wardrobe, that looked as though it had belonged to her great-grandmother, had been called upon for a costume which was quaint and old-fashioned and altogether lovely. She was evidently much younger than Edith Varney, perhaps just sixteen, Wilfred's age. With outstretched arms she barred the door completely, and Thorne, of course, came to an abrupt stop.

"Oh, good evening," she panted, as soon as she found speech; she had run without stopping from her house across the street.

"Good evening, Miss Mitford," he answered, stopping to one side to let her pass, but through calculation or chance she kept her position at the door.

"How lucky this is!" she continued. "You are the very person I wanted to see. Let's sit down and then I'll tell you all about it. Goodness me, I am all out of breath just running over from our house."

Thorne did not accept her invitation, but stood looking at her. An idea came to him.

"Miss Mitford," he said at last, stepping toward her, "will you do something for me?"

"Of course I will."

"Thank you very much, indeed. Just tell Miss Varney, when she comes down—just say good night for me and tell her that I've gone."

"I wouldn't do such a thing for the wide, wide world," returned Caroline Mitford in pretended astonishment.

"Why not?"

"It would be a wicked, dreadful story, because you wouldn't be gone."

"I am sorry you look at it that way," said Thorne, "because I am going."

Good night, Miss Mitford."

But before he could leave the room, the girl, who was as light on her feet as a fairy, caught him by the arm.

"No—you don't seem to understand. I've got something to say to you."

"Yes, I know," said Thorne; "but some other time."

"No, now."

Of course, he could have freed himself by the use of a little force, but such a thing was not to be thought of. Everything conspired to keep him when his duty called him away, he thought quickly.

"There isn't any other time," said Caroline. "It is tonight. We are going to have a starvation party."

"Good heavens!" exclaimed Thorne; "another!"

"Yes we are."

"I can't see how it concerns me."

"It is going to be over at our house, and we expect you in half an hour."

"I shouldn't think you would want to play at this time."

"We are not going to play. We are going to make bandages and sandbags."

"And—"

"You won't need me."

"Yes, you can tell us the best way to—"

"Thank you, Miss Mitford, I can't come. I have my orders and I am leaving tonight."

"Now, that won't do at all," said the girl, putting. "You want to Mamie Jones' party; I don't see why you should treat me like this."

"Mamie Jones!" said Thorne. "Why, that was last Thursday, and now I have got orders, I tell you, and—"

"No, my dear, I have been too busy."

"What have you got to do, Wilfred?" she asked incoherently.

"That? Oh, nothing; it is only—say, mother, have you written that letter yet?"

"No, my dear, I have been too busy."

"What have you got to do, Wilfred?" she asked incoherently.

"That? Oh, nothing; it is only—say, mother, have you written that letter yet?"

"No, my dear, I have been too busy."

"What have you got to do, Wilfred?" she asked incoherently.

"That? Oh, nothing; it is only—say, mother, have you written that letter yet?"

"No, my dear, I have been too busy."

"That? Oh, nothing; it is only—say, mother, have you written that letter yet?"

"No, my dear, I have been too busy."

I have been trying to write it, though, since I came down, but I have had one interruption after another. I think I will go into your father's office and do it there."

"She gathered up her paper and turned to leave the room. "It is a hard letter for me to write, you know," she added as she went away.

Wilfred, evidently much relieved at his mother's departure, took the package from under his coat, put it on the table, and began to undo it. He took from it a pair of very soiled, dilapidated gray uniform trousers. He had just lifted them up when he heard Caroline's step on the porch, and the next moment she came into the room through the long French window. Wilfred stood petrified with astonishment at the sudden and unexpected appearance of his young beloved, but soon recovered himself and began rolling the package together again, hastily and awkwardly.

"What's that?"

"I say she expects you, that's all."

"Who expects me?"

"Why, Edith, of course; who do you suppose I was talking about all this time?"

"Oh, she expects me to—"

"Why, of course, she does. You are to take her over. You needn't stay if you don't want to. Now I will go and tell her you are waiting."

"Oh, very well," said Thorne, smiling. "I she expects me to take her over. I will do so, of course, but I can't stay a moment."

"Well," said Caroline. "I thought you would come to your senses some time or another. See here, Mr. Captain, she says 'most ready'."

"Well, how do I know?"

"What dress did she have on?"

"Dress?"

"Oh, you mean! Why, she's only got two."

"Yes; well, very likely, this was one of them, Miss Mitford."

"No matter, I am going upstairs to see, anyway. Captain Thorne, you can wait out there on the porch, or perhaps, if you like, you can go and tell her you are waiting."

"Oh, very well," said Thorne, smiling. "I she expects me to take her over. I will do so, of course, but I can't stay a moment."

"Well, how do I know?"

"I should think I did," said Caroline ecstatically. "I just love every one of them. They are going to fight for me and for us, and I love them."

"Why don't you accept one of them before he dies, then, and have done with it? I suppose it will be one of those smart young fellows with a cavalry uniform."

"It will be some kind of a uniform, I can tell you that. It won't be anyone that stays in Richmond."

"Now I see what it was," said Wilfred, looking at her gloomily. "I had to stay in Richmond, and—"

The boy choked up and would not finish.

"Well," said Caroline. "That made a heap of difference. Why, I was the only girl in Franklin street that didn't have someone who was engaged to her. Just think what it was to be out of it like that! You have no idea how I suffered; besides, it is our duty to help all we can. There aren't many things a girl can do. But Colonel Woolbridge—he's one of Morgan's men, you know—said that 'this boy fight twice as well when they have a sweetheart at home.' I couldn't waste an engagement on—"

"And is that why you let them—"

"Good evening," he said, his voice as cold as her own.

They both of them had started for the hall door and in another second they would have met.

"Excuse me," said Caroline. "I'm in a hurry."

"That's plain enough. Another party, I suppose, and dancing."

"What of it? What's the matter with dancing, I'd like to know."

"Nothing is the matter with dancing if you want to, but I must say that it is a pretty way of going on, with the cannon roaring not six miles away."

"Well, what do you want us to do? Cry about it! I have cried my eyes out already; I haven't got a heap of good now, haven't I?"

"Oh, I haven't time to talk about such petty details. I have some important matters to attend to," he returned loftily.

"I was you that started it," said the girl.

Wilfred turned suddenly, his manner at once losing its badly assumed lightness.

"Oh, you needn't try to fool me," he reproached her; "I know well enough how you have been carrying on since our engagement was broken off. Half a dozen officers proposing to you—a dozen for all I know."

"What difference does it make?" she retorted pettily. "I haven't got to marry them all, have I?"

"Well, it isn't very nice to go on like that," said Wilfred with infuse into which he vain sought to infuse a detached, judicial, and indifferent appearance. "Proposals by the whole sale!"

"Goodness me!" exclaimed Caroline. "what's the use of talking about it to me. They're the ones that propose, I don't. How can I help it?"

"Oh," said Wilfred loftily, "you can help it all right. You helped it with me."

"Well," she answered, with a quiver look at him, "that was different."

"And ever since you threw me over—" he began to throw you over, you just went over, she interrupted.

"I went over because you walked off with Major Silbey that night we were at Drury's Bluff," said the boy, "and you encouraged him to propose. You admit it," he said, as the girl nodded her head.

"Of course I did. I didn't want him hanging around forever, did I? That's the only way to finish them off. I laid a card around my neck, saying, 'No proposals received here. Apply at the office.' Would that please you any better? Well," she continued, as the boy shrugged his shoulders, "it doesn't make any difference to you what I do. It doesn't even make as much as that to me."

"Oh, it doesn't? I think it does, though. You looked as if you enjoyed it pretty well while the Third Virginia was in the city."

"I certainly do."

"What are you waiting for, then?" asked Wilfred.

The girl took the trousers and dropped on her knees before him.

"Certainly, it didn't hurt me, and it pleased them. Most of 'em will never come back to try it again, and it is our duty to help all we can."

"And you really want to help all you can, do you?" asked Wilfred desperately.

"Well, if I were to join the army would you help me—that way?"

This was a direct question.

"Why, of course I would, if there was anything I could do," she answered.

"Well, there is something you can do. He untrolled his package and seized the trousers by the waistband and dangled them before her eyes.

"Cut those off," he said; "they are too long. All you have to do is to cut them here and sew up the ends, so that they don't ravel out."

Caroline stared at him in great bewilderment. She had expected something quite different.

"Why, they are uniform trousers," she said finally. "You are going to join the army?"

"Give them to me."

"Hush! don't talk so loud, for heaven's sake," said Wilfred. "I've got a jacket here too. He drew out of the parcel a small army jacket, a private soldier's coat. "It's nearly a year old, you know, and he was just around my neck, saying, 'No proposals received here. Apply at the office.' Would that please you any better? Well," she continued, as the boy shrugged his shoulders, "it doesn't make any difference to you what I do. It doesn't even make as much as that to me."

Everything Democratic.

Oconto Enterprise.—It seems opportune to intimate to those seasoned warriors who have already cast their "hats into the ring" for the U. S. Senatorship, that in the coming melee they need not bank on "fat" their chances out of the fire. There is only one kind of Democrat now and that's the Wilson kind, they will vote for some good Democrat for United States Senator and thousands of fair minded citizens, of all parties, will vote for him and elect him just to change existing conditions, which for some years have been anything but creditable to the state. A Democratic governor and a Democratic legislature are also sorely needed and the good people of the state know this so well that they, when opportunity presents itself, elect a governor and a legislature of their own.

The Wisconsin Democratic Press Association is the latest organization in the state and its influence is being rapidly felt by the political managers, who are already endeavoring to learn who they favor for the big office. It is a body that should have been organized years ago, and the rights of the newspaper men would have been more carefully considered. They may not need us now, but will soon, and this organization, strongly fortified, will be a power to contend with.

Wisconsin people who think "government by experts" a fine thing ought to study a while over the cost of the numerous commissions. Here are a few items showing what some of them expect to spend the next year or two, as evidenced by the figures in the appropriation bills: Industrial commission, $120,000 annually; tax commission, $189,500; railway rate commission, $183,000; fish and game department, $144,000; dairy and food commission, $95,000; banking department, $62,300 for two years. These embrace only the more important bodies. There are plenty of others that require the taxpayers' money. If you don't like all this fancy business, vote for a change next year and try the Democrats on a little economy practice.

A Lazy Husband Law.

A new law, designated as a "lazy husband law," goes into effect in the state of Washington. Under this law a man convicted of not supporting his family will not be sentenced to a term of confinement in jail, but instead will be sentenced to a term of so many months at work. The state authorities will undertake to find work for him, and will pay his wife and family $1.50 a day during the time the sentence lasts. Most of the work will be done on the public roads, and the nature and conditions of the employment may not be such as to make the subject extremely anxious to undertake a second term. The advantage of the plan is that instead of inflicting a roundabout punishment on the wife and children, it deals directly on the culprit himself and forces him to provide an income by his own toil for those dependent on him, no matter how much against his own inclination such a requirement may be. It looks as if the Washington law judiciously administered, might provide just the sort of encouragement that the lazy and non-supporting husband needs.

A Name for the Homestead.

The European practice of naming the old homesteads has many friends in America, and we are often requested to suggest a name for some farm which shall be descriptive, pleasing in sound, and not too large a mouthful to be euphonious.

Those who live on those farmsteads can usually name them more appropriately than can some one who perhaps has never seen them. However, with a view toward helping to suggest good sensible farm names that describe some prominent feature of the places often seen in different counties, we submit the following list of twenty-five:

The Maples, The Oaks, Hickory Hill Farm, Pleasant View, Riverview Farm, Prairie Home Farm, Twin Creek Farm, Alfalfa Dale, Griffith Homestead, Valley View Farm, Hillcrest, Spring Brook Dairy Farm, Jersey Meadows, Woodside, Plymouth Rock Farm, Cheviot Hill, Elm Lane, Berry Hill, The Gardens, Linc Home, Orchard Knoll, Cloverland, Sunnyside and Goodacres are names suggestive and descriptive.

The time will come when farm homes will be more universally known by their own names and we would be pleased to see this custom gain ground faster in Wisconsin and adjoining states. There is an added charm to a homestead with a home-like name which intimates something of the pursuits of its owners.

RUDOLPH.

On Sunday afternoon nearly thirty people gathered at the Moravian church and organized a Sunday school. The meeting was in charge of the pastor, Rev. H. B. Johnson. The Rev. Mr. Bryan of the Rev. E. Dewey made an address. Mr. Chas. Imig was elected superintendent. Mr. Carl Jacobson, assistant superintendent. Miss Louise Jacobson, secretary and treasurer, and Mrs. C. Imig, organist. There will be four classes. The teacher of the little children will be Miss Norma Bade; boys' class, Carl Jacobson; girls' class, Miss Laura Johnson; Bible class, Mr. Imig. The school will meet at 1:30 p. m., every Sunday. Boys and girls, men, and women, everybody, are invited to come and join in the study of the word of God.

SIZES SITUATION RIGHT

Assemblyman Conway Thinks Legislature is Wasting Time.

Assemblyman D. D. Conway, representing Wood County in the state legislature, was in town on some law business Wednesday, this being his first visit to Marshfield of any consequence since last winter. He appeared to be disgusted with the long session of the legislature, and according to reports of a speech he made some ten days ago he made no bones of saying so on the floor of the assembly.

"The legislature might just as well have stopped wasting time, passed the necessary bills, and adjourned two months ago," said Mr. Conway in talking with a Times man. There is a pitiful lot of obstruction as well as construction going on in the law-making body of the state, and I firmly believe that the legislature is a waste of time and money. There is no question about the gravity of the situation. The people of this country are meat eaters. They will have meat at any price so long as they have the money with which to buy. Our people are large and strong human beings, capable of doing large amounts of work. They must have energy for doing the vast amount of work the country and times demand. After all the talk and theories concerning the "eat" of a vegetable diet, it must be conceded that the American people are the healthiest strongest and most efficient race of human beings on earth, and their size and strength and efficiency are due in a marked degree to eating relatively large quantities of the best of meats in connection with wholesome fruits and vegetables.

If our children are to remain healthy and grow large and strong as they have in the past, and if our men and women are to be furnished doing the heavy work of this growing country, then we must have foods in the form of palatable and digestible proteins—juicy lean beef steaks and bacon, well streaked with fat and lean. No substitutes will do the work.

Without question this country has the natural possibilities for the production of the best live stock in the world. The possibilities have been demonstrated in a large measure, although the widest possibilities have not yet been realized. In the past a large share of our cattle, horses and sheep have been raised on the range and wild pasturage, practically the waste of our farms and free lands. But free range has been reduced to almost its lowest terms, and the time is soon coming when only a few thin acres will be left to Western herdsmen and flock masters. Also, farm lands have almost all been brought under the plow, which has reduced farm pasture to a very low quantity. Permanent pastures and wild grazing lands are scarce.

Inventor of the Babcock Test.

Wisconsin people, especially, will be interested in the action of the state board of university regents in making Dr. S. M. Babcock, widely famous as the inventor of the Babcock milk test, professor emeritus of the department of agricultural chemistry in Wisconsin university. Dr. Babcock has been in charge of this department for twenty-seven years, and his advancement to the post of professor emeritus means that while he will be relieved from active work at the university he will still continue to possess all degrees and privileges connected with the chair which he has held with such distinction. He is now seventy years of age and his long and faithful services richly entitle him to the new distinction which has now been conferred on him. Dr. Babcock is famous not only as the inventor of the so-called Babcock test, a device which afforded the first practical means of determining the relative proportion of butter fat in milk and thereby laid the foundation for the successful separation of these elements and consequent growth of the modern creamery industry, but also famous for the unusual example of selflessness which he set in refusing to personally profit from this and other extremely useful inventions perfected by himself. With rare generosity and magnanimity he decided to give his inventions to the world without cost or restriction, believing that in so doing he was aiding the progress of humanity and contributing to the success of the farmers, to whose cause he was sincerely devoted. The effect and result of his liberality, moreover, have entirely justified his judgment in the matter for the Babcock test started the dairy industry in this state, and throughout the world, for that matter, in a new line of activity that has given it wonderful growth and expansion. It is universally conceded that Dr. Babcock could easily have reaped millions of profits from his inventions, but instead of doing so he has preferred to rest content with the satisfaction derived from the thought that he has been a genuine benefactor to humanity.

Of such a man the people of Wisconsin can indeed feel proud, and no honors are too great to be conferred on him. His worthy example more-over, can not be too frequently recalled, for his remarkable unselfishness has set a mark that is in refreshing contrast to the sordid greed and avarice which far too generally permeate the business world in these modern times, when the dollar sign is the goal post aimed at by most people. Dr. Babcock has proved himself not that kind of a man, and for this he deserves the high esteem of all people who have benefited thru his generosity.

THERE ARE REASONS.

Why does Wisconsin grow larger crops on the average than other states? Why does Wisconsin sell more high priced seed grains than all other states combined? Why has Wisconsin more dairy cows than any other state? Why is the dairy industry increasing faster in Wisconsin than in any other state? Why does Wisconsin capture more prizes in national contests than any other state? Why did upper Wisconsin take the world's championship award on alfalfa at the last world wide contest? Why are the pea canning concerns placing nearly all the new factories in upper Wisconsin? Why are the best sugar factories looking to upper Wisconsin for increased product? Why are so many pickle factories and salting works being located in the upper Wisconsin counties? Why are several of the world's largest manufacturing creameries in the upper Wisconsin counties? Why does the best clover seed come from upper Wisconsin? Why are the pastures good in upper Wisconsin when dried out elsewhere?

A hint from Paris is that skirts may be wider, and this just when she is learning to tread the straight and narrow way.

MUST INCREASE PRODUCTION

Agricultural Writer Declares That Is the only Solution of High Meat Price Problem.

The population of the country is increasing, while the food supply is not increasing. More of some foods are grown now than in former years, yet the increase of food production in general is not commensurate with the population that consumes food. The last census, for instance, shows that in the preceding decade meat producing animals decreased 10 per cent, while the population during the same period increased more than 20 per cent. This condition makes the demand for meat larger than the supply, and hence one reason for the high price of meats and other foods.

The country is facing a grave shortage in live stock. There is no question about the gravity of the situation. The people of this country are meat eaters. They will have meat at any price so long as they have the money with which to buy. Our people are large and strong human beings, capable of doing large amounts of work. They must have energy for doing the vast amount of work the country and times demand. After all the talk and theories concerning the "eat" of a vegetable diet, it must be conceded that the American people are the healthiest strongest and most efficient race of human beings on earth, and their size and strength and efficiency are due in a marked degree to eating relatively large quantities of the best of meats in connection with wholesome fruits and vegetables.

If our children are to remain healthy and grow large and strong as they have in the past, and if our men and women are to be furnished doing the heavy work of this growing country, then we must have foods in the form of palatable and digestible proteins—juicy lean beef steaks and bacon, well streaked with fat and lean. No substitutes will do the work.

Without question this country has the natural possibilities for the production of the best live stock in the world. The possibilities have been demonstrated in a large measure, although the widest possibilities have not yet been realized. In the past a large share of our cattle, horses and sheep have been raised on the range and wild pasturage, practically the waste of our farms and free lands. But free range has been reduced to almost its lowest terms, and the time is soon coming when only a few thin acres will be left to Western herdsmen and flock masters. Also, farm lands have almost all been brought under the plow, which has reduced farm pasture to a very low quantity. Permanent pastures and wild grazing lands are scarce.

But even with the reduction of wild and tame grazing land, it is possible to economically produce more live stock in this country than ever has been produced in the past, and better stock of all kinds.

The farmer of today is in business for profit as well as pleasure. He will grow more live stock if he is paid well for it. But the time has come when meat animals and all live stock command excellent market prices, with every prospect for continued high prices. It is up to the farmer, then, to keep more live stock and to make good money with the industry. It can and will be done.

SONG OF REVOLT.

I have built your towns and cities, And over your widest streams I have flung with a giant's arm The web of strong steel beams. I have carved out the busy highways Through the marks where your commerce flows. With hammer and forge and anvil I have wrought your golden gains. I have girded the rock ribbed mountains With rails for the iron steed; I have delved in the earth's old bosom To answer the great world's need. I have clothed you, housed you, fed you.

For thousands of years gone by, I have stepped to the front when duty has called, and I've answered "Aye." I have rung from the soil denied me Your toil of the golden grains; I have garbed you in silks and satins And fettered your limbs with chains. I have given my sweat and muscle To build for you, stone on stone. The place of ease and pleasure— The hut I may call my own.

For a thousand years you've driven— A thousand years and a day; But I, like another Sampson, Am giving my muscles play. My brain is no longer idle; I see with a clearer sight, And piercing the gloom about me I'm seeing, I'm seeing the light. I see in the days before me My share of the things I've wrought; See justice no longer blinded. The weight of her scales unbought. I see in the not far future The day when the worker's share Is more than his belly's succor; Is more than a rag to wear.

I see on the morrow's mountains The glints of a golden dawn; The dawn of a day fast coming When striving and hate are gone. Lo, out of the vast darkness That fetters my limbs like steel, I can hear the swelling chorus That sings of the common weal. For a thousand years you've driven— For a thousand years and one. But I'm coming to take possession Of all the things you have done. And cities and towns and highways I've built and shall be mine own And Labor, at last unfettered, Shall sit on the world's great throne.

PLEASANT HILL.

(For Late for Last Week.) A very destructive hail storm visited our community Saturday evening at five o'clock. It was about a mile wide and did hundreds of dollars worth of damage. Corn potatoes and small grain were cut in shreds. Those in our vicinity who suffered most were: T. Simonson, H. Herzberg, W. Whitlock, Chas. Penske, Ole Duckie, E. Christensen, P. H. Likes, Aug. Zellmer and John Guehnang. The storm was accompanied by a high wind and driving rain in a southwest direction. It is the first one that ever has visited our vicinity in thirty years.

growing and fattening of cattle, and it is equally as good for sheep and horses. Being high in protein content, it furnishes elements for fattening and finishing. When it is used, less grain is needed.

Alfalfa is an exacting crop in its special needs, but when it becomes established in good soil and receives right treatment, it will yield from two to four times as much good feed per acre as corn, clover, wheat, oats, or timothy. And besides, while it is outclassing all the other common field crops in the production of a nutritious feed, which all farm animals like, it is at the same time adding nitrogen to the soil in large quantities than the best clover crop, and by means of its large tap roots, which grow as deep as 30 feet or more, it materially improves the soil physically. Growing alfalfa on the farm means the profitable keeping of more live stock, with continual improvement of the land.

Double the usual number of hogs can be grown on the alfalfa farm, and less than one-half the corn will be required to grow and finish them. You can feed alfalfa hay to hogs in winter the same as clover to cattle. When the hay is ground into meal and mixed with mill feeds, hogs and pigs will eat it as readily as they will other good feeds. The use of alfalfa is one way of producing cheap pork. The growing of this valuable forage crop is one of the many ways of profitably keeping more live stock on the farm. Better bred animals, more and better feeds, adequate shelter and equipment, and more interest in the business in general will mean more profit to farmers, and a partial solution of the food problem to the masses.

VESPER.

Fred McKee has purchased the E. A. Lange Medicine Co. outfit, consisting of team, wagon, etc., of G. Vorwalske, who has been their former agent for Wood County. He expects to start at once, making a thorough canvass of the county, starting in where Mr. Vorwalske has left off. The State Center joins in with his many friends in wishing him success in his new venture, and no doubt he will be called back instead of Fred in the near future. Mr. Vorwalske will return to his farm near Stratford.

Will Martin and crew of Vesper, have finished the inside work on Fred Nelson's house and returned to Vesper Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson now have a beautiful home and with practically all their farm under cultivation are in a situation to enjoy the fruits of their labors. They came here years ago when the later settler knows nothing about, but by hard work of these early settlers, they have seen the wilderness blossom as the rose.

WILD LAND FARMS.

What Bohemians Accomplished by Co-Operative Work.

In the spring of 1911 the Tennessee Central railroad located a colony of Bohemians on the Cumberland plateau at Mayland, under the name of the Bohemian Co-Operative Farming company. They purchased 5,300 acres in the woods without clearing, houses or fences. Immediately from New Jersey and Ohio Bohemian families came to the plateau and the work of transforming the wilderness into productive fields, gardens and orchards began. The story of this wonderful development is told by Rutledge Smith, industrial agent of the Tennessee Central railroad, as follows:

"The land was subdivided into fifty acre tracts, one tract to the family, so that the entire purchase would care for 100 families. Mr. Leonard Schwartz of New Jersey, an educated, cultured and trained farmer of large experience, was made manager of the colony, and the work of development has been under his immediate supervision. As the colony is co-operative in every respect, all the work is done by the Bohemians, no outside help being employed.

"The first work that was done after the property was subdivided was to build a few comfortable cottages to care for the pioneers. This done, they elaborated a careful program of production which would automatically expand with the increasing population. "I went up last week to see the fruits of their labors. I found nearly 100 light haired and bronzed faced sons and daughters of Bohemia, intelligent, happy and content. Satisfaction reigned supreme with them, and they expressed themselves as having reached a climax as near perfection to their ideals of life as it was possible to find. It made me feel good to receive the sincere gratitude of these sturdy people for bringing them to the plateau of Tennessee.

"Mr. Schwartz showed me over the lands. Where formerly the timbered jungle stood were modern, imposing barns overflowing with feed. The fields of timothy had cut nearly two tons per acre, and these had been turned and planted in turnips and cabbage for cow feed, and it looked as though they would produce enough to feed the mountain.

"When there were patches of buckwheat, rice and the vegetable gardens, all luxuriant and profitable. Vegetables have been canned for winter use and to sell.

"Not only have these thrifty sons of Bohemia supported themselves while making their homes, but are now reaping a distinct profit. They all have money, pay for what they buy, are good citizens and a blessing to Tennessee.

"Every day is workday for them. It is never too hot or cold; they keep everlastingly at it. They work with intelligence, with a definite idea in view and accomplish what they start out to do. They do not practice the habit of our farmers in going to bed at dark and rising before day. After supper they read and by out the work for the morning, discuss together the best means for advancement, spend an occasional evening in social enjoyment, and at a reasonable hour in the morning are in the fields and there they remain until dark. Success can only crown the efforts of such intelligent labor.

"In the field the Bohemian rides, no waiting between the plow handles for him. There is no dragging the plow around at the head of the land, but the horses keep on moving. Everything that a horse or machine can do the Bohemian makes them do.

"They are now turning their attention to horticulture and orchards are being laid out on a scientific scale and thoroughly prepared. Also dairying is coming in for its proper share.

"Just as rapidly as they can build cottages without taking the proper time from the fields, families from New Jersey are ready to fill them, and it will not be long until their full hundred families are enjoying the peace and plenty of those who by intelligent effort are transforming the plateau into the south's garden spot."

Understood.

"I, sir," says the man with the uninterested face, "came from an old family. Its traditions and its — "Shake, old chap," interrupts the other. "I married into one."

Drive Out of Your Way.

Possibly some other lumber yard is a little handier for you than ours. But remember that we will make it to your advantage to drive quite a bit out of your way to buy your lumber from us.

This is true of the smallest amount of material, but if you're figuring on a building bill of some kind, the advantage will of course be much greater.

We have splendid stock and will be pleased to quote you on anything wanted.

DETROIT, U. S. A.

TO DEALERS, SUB-DEALERS, LIMITED DEALERS AND BRANCH MANAGERS:

June 3, 1913.

For fear that you have not noticed Page 343 of the Ford Times for May, wherein an emphatic denial is made of certain silly rumors concerning a change of ownership in the Ford Motor Company and a consequent reduction in the price of Ford Cars, we call your attention to the following plain statement of facts:

- 1st. The Standard Oil Company or any other company has not bought the Ford business or even a single share of our Company's stock, as we have no interest to sell.
- 2nd. We have no connection whatever with any other automobile concern.
- 3rd. We will not sell three cars for one thousand dollars.
- 4th. We will not market our product through mail-order houses or direct to the retail buyers, or through any other channels except our regularly licensed dealers.

We expect and want everyone connected with the Ford organization to deny rumors of this character, resting assured that when any changes are made in Ford policy our organization will be the first to know about it.

A dealer need only to read his contract and do business accordingly, as his contract furnishes him ample guarantee that such rumors are without foundation. FORD MOTOR COMPANY.

"Which is more expensive keeping an auto or an air-ship?"
"Oh, an air-ship—the upkeep is much higher."

If you are having cold feet on any of your building plans that you talked about in the Spring, come in and see the boss and swap a few of your troubles for some of his'n. He can match you on anything in the trouble line, but his long suit is to convert troubles into bubbles and blow them off your map. If you ever catch him with a grinch it's not caused by frigid tribulations but just because we can't always get enough good flooring or something in the timber line to fill our orders. That doesn't happen often, but it will sometimes in spite of everything. You know this town is not standing still. She is "going some" and that's no Arabian Night's fairy tale.

NEKOOSA.
The White City band of Port Edwards last Thursday evening fulfilled its promise to give our people a first class, interesting concert. For about two hours the Port Edwards boys delighted the large crowd with many numbers of the best music we have heard in a long time. Each member rendered his part in masterful style, and they had the good fortune to secure for instructor Prof. Ellis of Grand Rapids, who understands his duties as a man ever did. He is a thorough musician, a perfect gentleman and handles his men in such a manner as to get all there is in them out. Our people all hope this was but the beginning of many such concerts.

Negotiations have been in progress for some time between Edgar Youngchild and F. X. Grode. Last Saturday they were concluded, and Mr. Grode is now the owner and proprietor of the barber shop that Edgar purchased of him about two years ago and has since conducted. After selling his business to Mr. Youngchild two years ago, as stated, Mr. Grode represented a wholesale barbers, supply house on the road in the interim, but during of this, the old longing to return to the best town on earth outweighed everything else, and Fox is here.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Richmond were guests at the Lacy Horton home, in Grand Rapids, Sunday. They went up to view the little Miss Margaret Horton, the first grandchild to arrive in the Richmond family. If you think the grandparents are not proud of it you should think again. The little Miss has probably made many nannies thus early in life, but the greatest of these is on grandpa and grandma.

A number of our citizens who are lovers of outdoor sports, especially lawn tennis, have erected a handsome court near the river bank in the paper company lawn, on which some one is playing nearly every hour in the day. As one gentleman expressed it to us, nobody knows how we people who are shut up in a close office all day appreciate this sport and exercise. Long live the tennis court.

Among the season's dramatic successes, "A Girl of the Underworld" stands out prominently. The play is one of intense interest, dealing with a new phase of life in a great city. The date will be Tuesday, August 5th at Daly's Theater.

John Fogarty, wife and children, of Green Bay, drove down in their car and spent Saturday as guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Gulligan. Mr. Fogarty was a former superintendent of the Nekosia-Edwards paper mill here, and has many friends in Nekosia and vicinity, who were glad to see him.

Miss Grace Justeson, who was hurt in an automobile accident at Grand Rapids, is rapidly recovering from her many injuries.

"The Rose Dream" the big vaudeville act at Daly's theater is the best vaudeville production ever produced in the city. Do not fail to see it at Daly's theater all week. All seats 10c, children 5c.

Fatten Your Farm.

A well known writer in a recent issue of Farm and Fireside writes: "A tendency exists among many farmers to burn all cornstalks, loose straw, clover-chaff and superfluous roughage about the place. But it is too expensive."

"Every time an acre of stalks is burned twenty-one pounds of nitrogen goes into the air and will cost you $2.50 to buy back again. Wheat or oats straw from an acre contains about twelve to fourteen pounds of nitrogen, and clover-chaff three times that amount."

"One can easily figure from these deductions what a reckless loss to the farm is a fire in the chaff-pile or stackfield. The cut-away and disk harrows will chop these bulky materials up ready for the plow where they can be turned under. If you want to fatten the old farm, stuff it with organic matter."

—People who are looking for bargains in the grocery line should look over the ad of Johnson & Hill Co. They are holding a big sale in the grocery line and are offering some exceptional bargains.

AS IT IS TODAY.

Mary had a little lamb.

Its fleece was white as snow—The circumstances were not quite what they were long ago.

Then Mary was a poor young maid And lamb were very cheap.

Since then you know how meat has risen by speedy bound and leap.

The olden Mary went to school And took the lamb along.

For lambs those days were only pets—They bought them for a song.

The modern Mary viewed her lamb Much as a bank account.

She knew it would be valued at A very large amount.

Because she had the little lamb She was a famous girl!

The other ladies followed her In hat and dress and curl.

The papers pictured her each day And rather wildly guessed At what might be the total worth Of the lamb she possessed.

She sold the lamb as chops and such, Then bought a railroad line, A country place, a city home And jewels far and fine.

She went abroad and met a duke—A dutchess now is she, And is restoring castles old, As happy as can be.

—Four acts of intense dramatic interest, relieved by many flashes of brilliant comedy is promised in the play "A Girl of the Underworld," to be produced at Daly's Theater, Tuesday, August 5th.

Literary Waitress.

"Will you have a cereal for your breakfast?" asked the waitress.

"A cereal? No, thank you" replied the witty guest. "I should prefer some short stories."

Whereupon she brought him some lambs' tails.

TAKE EFFECT AUGUST 15.
Out in Parcel Post Rates Made by the Department.
Washington, July 25.—Despite senatorial criticism of the proposed reduction in parcel post rates and the increase in the size of the packages, Postmaster Gen. Burleson today announced he would issue the final orders at once putting the changes into effect, Aug. 15. The announcement came after the wisdom of making the changes had been subjected to a searching review before the senate postoffice committee in the presence of the postmaster general.

Chairman Clark of the interstate commerce commission, explaining why the commission had sanctioned the proposed changes, said he believed the postmaster general had ample power under the law to make the changes.

"I am convinced that the postoffice ought to, can and will extend the parcel post until it will carry all packages up to 100 pounds," he added.

Chicago & Wisconsin Valley Takes Another Lease of Life.

The Chicago & Wisconsin Valley railroad, a proposed electric line from Madison to Stevens Point, which was recently reported to be defunct, owing to a lack of funds, has come to the surface again, and the report now is that the line will be built.

It was reported that the new company would abandon the north end of the project, but this information has been disputed and it is said that the plan is now to build thru to Wausau. As the line was surveyed to pass about six miles east of this city, Grand Rapids citizens were not wasting any sleep over the matter.

GRAND CHAUTAUQUA EXTRAVAGANZA

Tolomeo's Royal Italian Band and Grand Opera Company.

TO APPEAR THE FIFTH DAY

It will be a pleasure to our people to learn that we are so fortunate as to have on our Chautauqua this year, no less an organization than Tolomeo's Royal Italian Band and Grand Opera Quartet. This great band is under the exclusive management, this summer, of the Jeffers-Wick Chautauqua system. It is only through this system that we are able to secure this noted band and opera company for the grand festive day of our Chautauqua.

Signor Tolomeo, who is from the Royal Conservatory of Italy, has gathered about him a group of real artists. In the afternoon they will give a popular concert, and in the evening they are scheduled to give a condensed production of Giuseppe Verdi's great opera composition, "Il Trovatore." This unusual offering should be enjoyed by all our people, for it is the most magnificent play ever staged with music. We are given full assurance that the Grand Opera Quartet, which accompanies the Royal Italian Band, is composed of the very best artists to be found.

Tolomeo.

This Grand Opera Quartet is composed of artists who have achieved success in their work and won the applause of critics all over the world. Much could be said of each individual member of the company, how they have won their way up to the enviable positions they now hold, and of the enthusiasm with which they have been received, as they appeared in the different roles of the world's best operas; but space will not permit us to mention each one in detail. It is enough to know that each member of the quartet is of recognized standing and great ability, and that in the coming of the great musical organization, our interest will center largely around these great singers. We should feel highly favored indeed, that we are to have them in our city.

Tolomeo's Royal Italian Band and Grand Opera Company will be with us the fifth day of our Chautauqua. We expect this great day of music to draw one of the largest crowds that our city has had in years. This is a magnificent company, every one of them artists, traveling at tremendous expense. It is only the "Chautauqua idea" that of organization and system, that makes it possible for us to have these rare opportunities at home, which we usually go to the cities to hear. Let us pack the tent to overflowing for this big music festival.

THE CHAUTAUQUA IDEA.

It is the Dominating Influence of the Day.

In the year 1874 Mr. Lewis Miller and Bishop John H. Vincent conceived the idea of holding an annual summer meeting where the great speakers and musicians of the country could meet a great gathering of people who were out for their vacation. The place they selected was Chautauqua Lake, New York, and the plan proved more than a success.

The name of this first meeting place somehow attached itself to the great movement, and today the majority of us look at the great posters and signs which announce our Chautauqua, without any idea about how we happen to call it by that name. That first Chautauqua was almost forty years ago, but the movement is still constantly gaining ground, until today a town or city is considered non-progressive if it fails to hold a Chautauqua assembly.

Not only the movement itself, but the spirit of the old Chautauqua remains. The main purpose of the assembly is still to bring the very best in music and entertainment, and the most noted of public speakers before the Chautauqua assemblies of every town.

When we study the history of the great Chautauqua movement, and note its rapid spread, we are led to wonder how any idea could have attained such universal and enthusiastic recognition and support. The Chautauqua assembly is the greatest force in existence today in making popular our great questions of ethics, education and politics. We consider our city especially fortunate in securing these advantages for our own people.

Governor Sanders of Louisiana Talks at Chautauqua Assembly.

LOUISIANA, queen state of the southland, sends its most famous man, Governor J. Y. Sanders, as one of the big attractions for the local Chautauqua. He will lecture on the subject, "A Southerner's Estimate of Abraham Lincoln," on the fourth afternoon of the Chautauqua. This will be a topic of absorbing interest, treated from a standpoint that is novel to the people of the north. Governor Sanders will tell of the new spirit that is in the south. He will tell his story in a way that will be enthralling, for he is noted far and wide as one of the most brilliant orators of the nation. Louisiana, home of eloquent men, calls Governor Sanders as the flower of all its garden. He has risen to the pinnacle of political success. His ascent has been meteoric. Starting as a member of the state legislature in 1900, he has progressed in the few intervening years to the proud distinction of an almost unanimous choice as United States senator. He resigned that post of honor because he believed he could serve his state best as governor. He is believed to be the only man in America who ever has done such an act of service for his state. Governor Sanders is famed not only as a brilliant orator, but also as a great reformer. While governor he secured the enactment of laws to abolish race gambling and to control the liquor traffic. He also brought about the enactment of laws for better roads. His record is strong and clean. He is ranked as perhaps the greatest man in the south today, and his oratory is classed with that of the silver tongued orator of the Platte, whose eloquence ruled the last national Democratic convention.

Don't miss this rare opportunity on the afternoon of the fourth day of the Chautauqua.

EXPECT FAST TIME

Motor Boats to Race at Keokuk in Later Part of August.

Commodore J. Stuart Blackton of the Motor Boat Club of America, whose "Baby Reliance 11" broke all existing world's records at the annual regatta of the Mississippi Valley Power Boat Association at Davenport, last summer, has notified Chairman Charles P. Hanley of the racing committee that he will send two new "Reliances" to the Association's races which will be held this year at Keokuk, Iowa, Aug. 26, 27 and 28.

This means that the Mississippi Valley will again set up a world record for high speed power boats, for Commodore Blackton has had experts working over since last year on a boat that would pass the 66-mile-an-hour mark. Whether this will be accomplished, remains to be proven, but it seems certain that it will. For last year's "Baby Reliance" set over the day at 52.9 miles, nearly 10 miles faster than any previous record.

There is prospect of the keenest rivalry for championship honors at Keokuk next month. Commodore James A. Pugh of Chicago, has wired the committee that he will be at the starting line with "Disturber 111," the 40-foot dropline which has 700 horse power stored in 24 cylinders. This is the largest power plant ever packed in an American racing hull. Last season "Disturber" was too powerful for her fittings; something was constantly wrong. Commodore Pugh has had two experts at work on her since last fall. In trials in Chicago earlier she is said to have made better than 55 miles an hour. Then would seem to insure an epoch making race at Keokuk, where the new thirty mile lake, created by the $27,000,000.00 power dam, is said to form the finest race course in America.

James Kerr, probably the oldest printer in the state of Wisconsin, died at his home in Green Bay on Saturday, July 19th. Mr. Kerr started in the printing business in 1841 and had been at the business ever since until he was incapacitated about three years ago by a fall, which resulted in paralysis. He published the Green Bay Review for a number of years, having gone into the business at Port Howard, now a part of Green Bay, in 1877, and has since been located there. Mr. Kerr was 83 years of age at the time of his death.

There is one variety of the genus homo who, like the North American passenger pigeon, is rapidly becoming extinct. We refer to the tramp printer. There was a time, not so many years ago, when every few weeks one of these knights of the road would blow in and strike the boss for a job, and if he was successful in securing one, he would turn to and make things move in a manner that was of great wonder to the "devil" and some of the other members of the force. These tramp printers visited large towns and small ones and their wanderings often carried them over the entire country, and it was impossible to mention a town that they had not visited. They often had a vivid imagination and this helped them out in describing their wanderings. But the age of invention has placed its mark on the journeyman printer and he has receded before its onward march until he is seldom seen in the haunts of man. One visited Grand Rapids recently and asked for work. As he did not look as if he cared particularly for work we went to the trouble of securing him a job. He explained that he did not care particularly for a steady job; just wanted something to help out for a few days. He demonstrated by his actions that it was not a steady job that he was after, for he put in about a week and then filled up on poor whiskey, got insulted by somebody and left the town in a huff. It doesn't take much to offend one of these gentlemen, notwithstanding the fact that they may be wearing clothes that they could only be handled by a pair of tongs.

Pardon of Dietz Sought.
Would Have to Serve Sixteen Years to Have Parole Considered.
Waupaca, Wis., July 22.—John Dietz, defender of Cameron Dam, must serve sixteen years and three months of his life sentence on a murder charge before a petition for parole can be considered, according to members of the state board of control which was in session at the prison last week.
Members of the Dietz family, on lecture tours throughout the state have circulated numerous petitions for the pardon of Dietz and which have been sent to the governor. As the result of the statements made by the members of the state board of control, it is probable that attempts to secure a parole for the Cameron Dam defender will be abandoned and instead an attempt made to secure Dietz's release from the penitentiary through a pardon from the governor.

Ambition.
Let others work and lose their health in piling up the so-called wealth. But that is not my wish. Let others burn the midnight oils. Devising ways of grabbing spoils. I'd rather sit and fish.
Let others solve the problems great. Affecting the affairs of state; None of that on my dish. Let others hew the nation's path And bear the thankless public's wrath. I'd rather sit and fish.
Let others lead the strenuous life That's full of worry, toil and strife. Let others wear their lives away, By living five years every day; I'd rather sit and fish.

Safety in Lightning Storm.
Every year quite a large number of people are killed by lightning because they did not know what to do in a thunder storm.
First of all, you are safer indoors than out. Most people get killed out in the open. If you are caught in a thunder storm, then don't be afraid of sheltering under a tree because you have heard that it is dangerous.
It is dangerous to shelter under a single tree, because lightning likes to strike the highest point and a solitary tree is the highest point as a rule for some distance around. But you are pretty safe if you take shelter in a wood. A tree in a wood is seldom struck.
Certain trees are more dangerous than others. If you have a choice between an oak and a beech, take the beech tree, all the time. A far greater number of oak trees are struck than beech trees. Elm trees are nearly as dangerous as oak trees. Avoid big crowds and collections of animals. For some reason—probably because of the warmth that rises from their bodies—crowds of animals and persons are liable to be struck by lightning.

In the Laundry.
If one teaspoonful of peroxide of hydrogen is added to half a tub of the water in which white clothes are rinsed the result will be an agreeable surprise. It acts as the best bleaching agent known, for it gives a pure white color without any damage to the fabric. This may be applied to silk and wool as well as linen.

NOTICE TO TRIBUNE SUBSCRIBERS.

The new Postmaster General has notified all country newspapers that the ruling of the department as to delinquent subscriptions must be complied with and blanks have recently been furnished the papers on which to make a report as to the condition of their mailing list. From now on weekly newspapers will not be permitted the second class mailing privilege on papers which are more than a year behind in account. This means that the weekly newspapers will necessarily have to remove many names from their lists as most publishers have subscribers who are more than a year in arrears. The Tribune is no exception to this rule and neither will it be any exception as to the mailing privilege. We must comply with the law and do so must remove from our list those who are in arrears for the paper more than one year. Bills will be mailed shortly to all who are in arrears and we hope there will be prompt response for we desire to retain all of our present subscribers. We would regret very much to lose any of our old friends, just because they are a year or more behind, when we know they intend to pay, but the postal laws are mandatory and we cannot oppose them. Therefore if you do not pay after receiving your notice of arrearage and do not receive your paper within a few weeks thereafter do not blame the publisher. We are doing our best to give you a clean, carefully edited local paper, and we hope you appreciate what we have done and are trying to do for the city and county sufficiently to square up and remain with us. Under the postal laws newspapers are supposed to be paid for in advance, if not but one year's credit can be extended. The Tribune publishers will conform to the law even though it may eventually mean a big decrease in our subscription list. If you cannot pay up your arrearage at once, a letter promising payment and an order authorizing the continuance of the paper will be accepted by the post office department as significant of good faith on your part and under such order we will be permitted to carry you for a while and continue the paper. This is a question of importance and we hope every one of our subscribers will give it the proper attention.

WASH YOUR MONEY.

Uncle Sam Can do the Trick While You Wait.

Behind a wire screened care employees of the United States government have now gone into the laundry business. They are washing United States bank notes and ironing them. It is not generally understood that when anybody gets old greenbacks, it does not matter whether a dollar or a thousand, if he sent it to the treasury department and requested a new bill he would have to have it. All the bankers in the country have always had the right to turn in all old money and get new for it. The old money was assorted, counted and tied in packages in the treasury department and then taken to a big eyelet machine, where great holes were cut thru the bundles of money, and from there it was sent to a mangle, where it was chewed up into fine pulp and then moulded to make wrinkles for sale. They are not a bit pretty, being a nasty greenish gray, and are nearly always warped out of shape; but they sell them for souvenirs, as there is a kind of fascination in knowing that the tiny imitation of the Washington monument which you hold in your hand represents $250.000.

The washing machine is still in an experimental stage, it is said, and seems to be doing pretty good work. It is estimated that this will save a vast sum for the treasury. It costs $13.40 to make 1000 bank notes. It costs but 50 cents to rejuvenate the same number.

The machine is 15 feet long and five feet wide, and looks something like a newspaper printing press. It has dozens of rolls, many gears and operates with the same clack and clang. The money is placed between two canvas belts at one end of the machine. It runs thru a solution of laundry soap and boiling hot water, where it is thoroughly cleaned. It then enters another vat, in which there is a solution of stiffening material and germ-killing solution. From this vat it is drawn between a gas heated mangle, where it is ironed.

It emerges from the machine two minutes and 15 seconds after it has started on its 54 foot trip, and is to all intents and purposes a perfect bill. When running at full speed the washing machine can wash about 4,000 bills an hour.

ARE YOU A SKEPTIC?
DO YOU DISBELIEVE BECAUSE YOU THOROUGHLY UNDERSTAND HOW MY ORIGINAL CHIROPRATIC METHODS REMOVE THE CAUSE OF DISEASE?
I have removed the cause of chronic headaches with 4 adjustments.
I have cured ulcers of the stomach with 12 adjustments.
I have removed the cause of appendicitis with 3 adjustments.
I have removed all traces of rheumatism with 7 adjustments.
These are but a few of the wonderful truths of chiropractic that are worth your consideration.
If you are a sufferer, call at my office and allow me to prove my statements. Let me refer you to people in this city who have known me since permanently opening my office two years ago; people who have been at my office and have seen the spinal adjustments and were restored to health, after having tried the many different old fashioned ways of treating the effects and symptoms instead of going at the cause.
You are the sufferer; I have the knowledge and ability to handle your case in a most scientific and accurate manner.
Consider and Investigate.
Find out about my methods, my prices they are reasonable.
Are you tired of experimenting with your ailments, then you should seek spinal adjustments and have the cause removed and be restored to health. You are the loser by delaying the opportunity of not becoming more acquainted.

Abstracts of Title
But few Real Estate titles are without error. Some errors occur in the careless drawing of Deeds, Mortgages and other transfer papers; other errors occur because those drawing papers are human and subject to making occasional errors. Others occur in the proceedings necessary under the foreclosure of Mortgages or through the sale of the interests of minor children and incompetent persons. Occasionally a property-holder pays taxes by mistake upon another's property and his own being returned delinquent, is sold for taxes.
There are so many dozens of ways that errors may occur in the transfer of land titles that the only safe and sensible course is to procure an Abstract of Title to any land you are about to buy or upon which you are to loan money.

James Kerr, probably the oldest printer in the state of Wisconsin, died at his home in Green Bay on Saturday, July 19th. Mr. Kerr started in the printing business in 1844, and had been at the business ever since until he was incapacitated about three years ago by a fall, which resulted in paralysis. He published the Green Bay Review for a number of years, having come into the business at Port Howard, now a part of Green Bay, in 1877, and has since been located there. Mr. Kerr was 83 years of age at the time of his death.

There is one variety of the genus homo who, like the North American passenger pigeon, is rapidly becoming extinct. We refer to the tramp printer. There was a time, not so many years ago, when a few woodsmen of these knights of the road would blow in and strike the boss for a job, and if he was successful in securing one, he would turn to and make things move in a manner that was often a wonder to the "devil" and some of the other members of the force. These tramp printers visited large towns and small ones and their wanderings often carried them over the entire country, and it was impossible to mention a town that they had not visited. They often had a vivid imagination and this helped them out in describing their wanderings. But the age of invention has placed its mark on the journeyman printer and he has roamed before its onward march until he is seldom seen in the haunts of man. One visited Grand Rapids recently and asked for work. As he did not look as if he cared particularly for work we went to the trouble of securing him a job. He explained that he did not care particularly for a steady job; just wanted something to help out for a few days. He was attracted by his actions that it was not a steady job that he was after, for he put in about a week and then filled up on poor whiskey, got insulted by somebody and left the town in a huff. It doesn't take much to offend one of these gentlemen, notwithstanding the fact that they may be wearing clothes without any damage to the fabric. This may be applied to silk and wool as well as linen.

In the Laundry.

If one teaspoonful of peroxide of hydrogen is added to half a tub of the water in which white clothes are rinsed the result will be an agreeable surprise. It acts as the best bleaching agent known, for it gives a pure white color without any damage to the fabric. This may be applied to silk and wool as well as linen.

Motor Boats to Race at Keokuk in Latter Part of August.

Commodore J. Stuart Blackton of the Motor Boat Club of America, whose "Baby Reliance 111" broke all existing world's records at the annual regatta of the Mississippi Valley Power Boat Association at Davenport, last summer, has notified Chairman Charles P. Hanley of the racing committee that he will send two new "Reliances" to the Association's races which will be held this year at Keokuk, Iowa, Aug. 26, 27 and 28.

This means that the Mississippi Valley will again set up a world record for high speed power boats, for Commodore Blackton has had experts working ever since last year on a boat that would pass the 60-mile-an-hour mark. Whether this will be accomplished, remains to be proven, but it seems certain that it will. The last year's "Baby Reliance" slid over the dew at 52.9 miles, nearly 10 miles faster than any previous record.

There is prospect of the keenest rivalry for championship honors at Keokuk next month. Commodore James A. Pugh of Chicago, has wired starting line with "Disturber 111," the big 40-foot dromedary which has 700 horse power stored in 24 cylinders. This is the largest power plant ever packed in an American racing hull. Last season "Disturber" was too powerful for her fittings; something was constantly wrong. Commodore Pugh has had two experts at work on her since last fall. In trials in Chicago harbor she is said to have made better than 55 miles an hour. This would seem to insure an epoch making race at Keokuk, where the new thirty mile lake, created by the $27,000,000 power dam, is said to form the finest race course in America.

Pals Old-fashioned Taste.

Her mother was a bashful thing, Oh, how I loved her when she'd sing "On the other side of Jordan, In the sweet fields of Eden, There is rest for the weary, And there's rest for you. But now she has a daughter who Will sing this grand old hymn for you: "Oh, you kid, it's a bear, Cuddle up, kiss me quick, Hold me tight, you're a bear, That's the tanglest Smackase rag."

PARDON OF DIETZ SOUGHT.

Would Have to Serve Sixteen Years to Have Parole Considered.

Waupun, Wis., July 22.—John Dietz, defender of Cameron Dam, must serve sixteen years and three months of his life sentence on a murder charge before a petition for parole can be considered, according to members of the state board of control which was in session at the prison last week.

Members of the Dietz family, on lecture tours throughout the state have circulated numerous petitions for the pardon of Dietz and which have been sent to the governor. As the result of the statements made by the members of the state board of control, it is probable that attempts to secure a parole for the Cameron Dam defender will be abandoned and instead an attempt made to secure Dietz's release from the penitentiary through a pardon from the governor.

Ambition.

Let others work and lose their health In piling up the sordid wealth, But that is not my wish. Let others burn the midnight oils, Devising ways of gaining spoils; I'd rather sit and fish. Let others solve the problems great, Affecting the affairs of state; None of that on my dish. Let others hew the nation's path And bear the thankless public's wrath, I'd rather sit and fish. Let others lead the strenuous life That's full of worry, toil and strife, But that's not my ambition. Let others wear their lives away, By living five years every day; I'd rather sit and fish.

Safety in Lightning Storm.

Every year quite a large number of people are killed by lightning because they did not know what to do in a thunder storm.

First of all, you are safer indoors than out. Most people get killed out in the open. If you are caught in a thunder storm, then don't be afraid of sheltering under a tree because you have heard that it is dangerous.

It is dangerous to shelter under a single tree, because lightning likes to strike the highest point, and a solitary tree is the highest point as a rule for some distance around. But you are pretty safe if you take shelter in a wood. A tree in a wood is seldom struck.

Certain trees are more dangerous than others. If you have a choice between an oak and a beech, take the beech tree, all the time. A far greater number of oak trees are struck than beech trees. Elm trees are nearly as dangerous as oak trees.

Avoid big crowds and collections of animals. For some reason—probably because of the great numbers of animals and persons are liable to be struck by lightning.

NOTICE TO TRIBUNE SUBSCRIBERS.

The new Postmaster General has notified all country newspapers that the ruling of the department as to delinquent subscriptions must be complied with and blanks have recently been furnished the papers on which to make a report as to the condition of their mailing list. From now on weekly newspapers will not be permitted the second class mailing privilege on papers which are more than a year behind in account. This means that the weekly newspapers will necessarily have to remove many names from their lists as most publishers have subscribers who are more than a year in arrears. The Tribune is no exception to this rule and neither will it be any exception as to the mailing privilege. We must comply with the law and do so must remove from our list those who are in arrears for the paper more than one year. Bills will be mailed shortly to all who are in arrears and we hope there will be prompt response for we desire to retain all of our present subscribers. We would regret very much to lose any of our old friends, just because they are a year or more behind, when we know they intend to pay, but the postal laws are mandatory and we cannot oppose them. Therefore if you do not pay after receiving your notice of arrearage and do not receive your paper within a few weeks thereafter do not blame the publisher. We are doing our best to give you a clean, carefully edited local paper, and we hope you appreciate what we have done and are trying to do for the city and county sufficiently to square up and remain with us. Under the postal laws newspapers are supposed to be paid for in advance, if not but one year's credit can be extended. The Tribune publishers will conform to the law even though it may eventually mean a big decrease in our subscription list. If you cannot pay up your arrearage at once, a letter promising payment and an order authorizing the continuance of the paper will be accepted by the post office department as significant of good faith on your part and under such order we will be permitted to carry you for a while and continue the paper. This is a question of importance and we hope every one of our subscribers will give it the proper attention.

WASH YOUR MONEY.

Uncle Sam Can do the Trick While You Wait.

Behind a wire screened cage employees of the United States government have now gone into the laundry business. They are washing United States bank notes and ironing them. It is not generally understood that when anybody gets old greenbacks, it does not matter whether a dollar or a thousand, if he sent it to the treasury department and requested a new bill he would have to have it. All the bankers in the country have always had the right to turn in old money and get new for it. The old money was assorted, counted and tied in packages in the treasury department and then taken to a big cycle machine, where great holes were cut thru the bundles of money, and from there it was sent to a mangle, where it was chewed up into fine pulp and then moulded to make crinkles for sale. They are not a bit pretty, being a nasty greenish gray, and are nearly always warped out of shape; but they're sold them for souvenirs, as there is a kind of fascination in knowing that the tiny imitation of the Washington monument which you hold in your hand represents $250,000.

The washing machine is still in an experimental stage, it is said, and seems to be doing pretty good work. It is estimated that this will save a vast sum for the treasury. It costs $13.30 to make 1000 bank notes. It costs but 30 cents to rejuvenate the same number.

The machine is 15 feet long and five feet wide, and looks something like a newspaper printing press. It has dozens of rolls, many gears and operates with the same clank and clang. The money is placed between two canvas belts at one end of the machine. It runs thru a solution of lemon soap and boiling hot water, where it is thoroughly cleansed. It then enters another vat, in which there is a solution of stiffening material and germ-killing solution. From this vat it is drawn between a gas heated mangle, where it is ironed.

It emerges from the machine two minutes and 15 seconds after it has started on its 64 foot trip, and is to all intents and purposes a perfect bill. When running at full speed the washing machine can wash about 4,000 bills an hour.

Abstracts of Title

But few Real Estate titles are without error. Some errors occur in the careless drawing of Deeds, Mortgages and other transfer papers; other errors occur because those drawing papers are human and subject to making occasional errors. Others occur in the proceedings necessary under the foreclosure of Mortgages or through the sale of the interests of minor children and incompetent persons. Occasionally a property-holder pays taxes by mistake upon another's property and his own being returned delinquent, is sold for taxes.

There are so many dozens of ways that errors may occur in the transfer of land titles that the only safe and sensible course is to procure an Abstract of Title to any land you are about to buy or upon which you are to loan money.

BEING THE HAPPENINGS OF A NIGHT IN RICHMOND IN THE SPRING OF 1865.

THE PLAY BY WILLIAM GILLETTE; BY CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY ILLUSTRATIONS BY EDGAR BERT SMITH

COPYRIGHT 1912 BY DODD, MEAD AND COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

Mrs. Varney, wife of a Confederate general, has lost one son and another is dying from wounds. She reluctantly gives her consent for Wilfred, the youngest, to join the army if his father consents. The federalists are making their last assault in an effort to capture Richmond. Edith Varney secures from President Davis a commission for Capt. Thorne, who is just recovering from wounds, as chief of the telegraph at Richmond. Capt. Thorne tells Edith that he has been ordered away. She declares he must not go and tells him of the commission from the president. He is strangely agitated and declares he cannot accept.

CHAPTER IV.

Miss Mitford's intervention. The captain started after her departing figure; he listened to her footfalls on the stairs, and then came to an instant resolution. He would take advantage of her opportune withdrawal. He turned back to the table, seized his hat, and started for the door, only to come face to face with another charming young woman, who stood breathless before him to his great and ill-concealed annoyance. Yet the newcomer was pretty enough and young enough and sweet enough to give any man pause for the sheer pleasure of looking at her, to say nothing of speaking to her.

The resources of an ancient wardrobe, that looked as though it had belonged to her great-grandmother, had been called upon for a costume which was quaint and old-fashioned and altogether lovely. She was evidently much younger than Edith Varney, perhaps just sixteen. Wilfred's age. With outstretched arms she barred the door completely, and Thorne, of course, came to an abrupt stop.

"Oh, good evening," she panted, as soon as she found speech; she had run without stopping from her house across the street.

"Good evening, Miss Mitford," he answered, stepping to one side to let her pass, but through calculation or chance she kept her position at the door.

"How lucky this is!" she continued. "You are the very person I wanted to see. Let's sit down and then I'll tell you all about it. Goodness me, I am all out of breath just running over from our house."

Thorne did not accept her invitation, but stood looking at her. An idea came to him.

"Miss Mitford," he said at last, stepping toward her, "will you do something for me?"

"Of course I will."

"Thank you very much, indeed. Just tell Miss Varney when she comes down—just say good night for me and tell her that I've gone."

"I wouldn't do such a thing for the wide, wide world," returned Caroline Mitford in pretended astonishment.

"Why not?"

"It would be a wicked, dreadful story, because you wouldn't be gone."

"I am sorry you look at it that way," said Thorne, "because I am going. Good night, Miss Mitford."

But before he could leave the room, the girl, who was as light on her feet as a fairy, caught him by the arm.

"No—you don't seem to understand. I've got something to say to you."

"Yes, I know," said Thorne; "but some other time."

"No, now."

Of course, he could have freed himself by the use of a little force, but such a thing was not to be thought of. Everything conspired to keep him when his duty called him away. He thought quickly.

"There isn't any other time," said Caroline. "It is tonight. We are going to have a starvation party."

"Good heavens!" exclaimed Thorne. "Another?"

"Yes we are."

"I can't see how it concerns me."

"It is going to be over at our house, and we expect you in half an hour."

"I shouldn't think you would want to play at this time."

"We are not going to play. We are going to make bandages and sendages and—"

"But Caroline was not to be put off. 'Now, there's no use talking about it,' she said vehemently.

"Yes, I see that."

"Didn't you promise to obey orders when I gave them? Well, these are orders."

"Another set?" laughed Thorne. "I don't know anything about any others. These are mine."

"Well, but this time—"

"This time is just the same as all the other times, only worse; besides I told her you would be there."

"What's that?"

"I say she expects you, that's all."

"Who expects me?"

"Why, Edith, of course; who do you suppose I was talking about all this time?"

"Oh, she expects me to—"

"Yes, of course, she does. You are to take her over. You needn't stay if you don't want to. Now I will go and tell her you are waiting."

"Oh, very well," said Thorne, smiling; "if she expects me to take her over I will do so, of course, but I can't stay a moment."

"Well," said Caroline, "I thought you would come to your senses some time or another. See here, Mr. Captain, was she most ready?"

"Well, now do I know?"

"What dress did she have on?"

"Innocent."

"Oh, you men! Why, she's only got two."

"Yes; well, very likely, this was one of them, Miss Mitford."

"No matter, I am going upstairs to see, anyway. Captain Thorne, you can wait out there on the veranda or, perhaps, it would be pleasant if you were to smoke a cigar out in the summer-house at the side of the garden. It is lovely there in the moonlight, and—"

"I know, but if I wait right here—"

"Those are my orders. It's cooler outside, you know, anyway, and—"

"Pardon me, Miss Mitford, orders never have to be explained, you know," interrupted the captain, smiling at the charming girl.

"That's right; I take back the explanation," she said, as Thorne stepped toward the window; "and, captain," cried the girl.

"Yes?"

"Be sure and smoke."

Thorne laughed, as he lighted his cigar and stepped out onto the porch, and thence into the darkness of the garden path.

"Oh," said Caroline to herself, "he is splendid. If Wilfred were only like that," she panted. "But then—our engagement's broken off anyway, so what's the difference. If he were like that—I'd—No—I don't think I'd—"

Her soliloquy was broken by the entrance of Mrs. Varney, who came slowly down the room.

"Why, Caroline dear! What are you talking about, all to yourself?"

"O—just—I was just saying, you know—that—why, I don't know what I was—Do you think it is going to rain to-day?" she returned in great confusion.

"Dear me, child, I haven't thought about it. Why, what have you got on? Is that a new dress, and in Richmond?"

"A new dress? Well, I should think so. These are my great-grandmother's mother's wedding clothes. Aren't they lovely? Just in the nick of time. I was on my very last rag, or, rather, they were on me, and I didn't know what to do. Mother gave me a key and told me to open an old horse-hair trunk in the attic, and these were in it. She seized the corners of her dress and pinbasted a step or two forward to show it off, and then dropped the older woman an elaborate, old-fashioned courtesy. "I ran over to show them to Edith," she resumed. "But she shivered and wanted to come over to my house."

"Upstairs, I think. I am afraid she can't come. I have just come from her room," Mrs. Varney continued as Caroline started to interrupt, "and she means to stay here."

"I will see about that," said Caroline, running out of the room.

Mrs. Varney turned and sat down at her desk to write a letter, which evidently, from her sighs, was not an easy task. In a short time the girl was back again. Mrs. Varney looked up from writing and smiled at her.

"You see it was no use, Caroline," she began.

"No use," laughed the girl; "well, you will see. I didn't try to persuade her or argue with her. I just told her that Captain Thorne was waiting for her in the summerhouse. Yes," she continued, as Mrs. Varney looked at her in astonishment, "he is still here, and he said he would take her over. You just watch which dress she has on when she comes down. Now I will go out there and tell him she'll be down in a minute. I have more trouble getting people fixed so that they can come to my party than it would take to run a blockade into Savannah every fifteen minutes."

Mrs. Varney looked at her departing figure pleasantly for a moment, and then, with a deep sigh, resumed her writing, but she evidently was not to conclude her letter without further interruption, for she had scarcely begun again when Wilfred came into the room with a bundle very loosely done up in gray brown paper. As his mother glanced toward him he made a violent effort to conceal it under his coat.

"What have you got there, Wilfred?" she asked inquisitively.

"That? Oh, nothing; it is only—say, mother, have you written that letter yet?"

"No, my dear, I have been too busy."

I have been trying to write it, though, since I came down, but I have had one interruption after another. I think I will go into your father's office and do it there."

She gathered up her paper and turned to leave the room. "It is a hard letter for me to write, you know," she added as she went away.

Wilfred, evidently much relieved at his mother's departure, took the package from under his coat, put it on the table and began to undo it. He took out a pair of very soiled, dilapidated, gray uniform trousers. He had just lifted them up when he heard Caroline's step on the porch, and the next moment she came into the room through the long French window. Wilfred stood petrified with astonishment at the sudden and unexpected appearance of his young beloved, but soon recovered himself and began rolling the package together again, hastily and awkwardly, and began to undo it.

"Now I see what it was," said Wilfred, looking at her gloomily. "I had to stay in Richmond, and—"

"The boy choked up and would not finish."

"Well," said Caroline, "that made a heap of difference. Why, I was the only girl on Franklin street that didn't have a—some one who was engaged to be out of it like that! You have no idea how I suffered; besides, it is our duty to help all we can. There aren't many things a girl can do, but Colonel Worbridge—he's one of Morgan's men, you know—said that the boys fight twice as well when they have a sweetheart at home. I couldn't—sweetheart at home."

"And is that why you let them all—"

"Ah, good evening, Mr. Varney," she said coolly.

"Good evening," he said, his voice as cold as her own.

They both of them had started for the hall door and in another second they would have met.

"Excuse me," said Caroline, "I'm in a hurry."

"That's plain enough. Another party, I suppose, and dancing."

"What of it? What's the matter with dancing, I'd like to know."

"Nothing is the matter with dancing if you want to, but I must say that it is a pretty way of going on, with the cannon roaring not six miles away."

"Well, what do you want us to do? Cry about it? I have cried my eyes out already; that would do a heap of good now, wouldn't it?"

"Oh, I haven't time to talk about such petty details. I have some important matters to attend to, he returned loftily.

"It was you that started it," said the girl.

Wilfred turned suddenly, his manner on once losing his badly assumed lightness.

"Oh, you needn't try to fool me," he reproached her; "I know well enough how you have been carrying on since our engagement was broken off. Half a dozen officers proposing to you—a dozen for all I know."

"What difference does it make?" she retorted pettily. "I haven't got to marry them all, have I?"

"Well, it isn't very nice to go on like that," said Wilfred with an air into which he vainly sought to infuse a detached, judicial, and indifferent appearance. "Proposals by the whole sale!"

"Goodness me!" exclaimed Caroline, "what's the use of talking about it to me. They're the ones that propose, I don't. How can I help it?"

"Oh," said Wilfred loftily, "you can help it all right. You helped it with me."

"Well," she answered, with a queer look at him, "that was different."

"And ever since you threw me over—"

"I didn't throw you over, you just went over," she interrupted.

"I went over because you walked off with Major Silsby that night we were on Gray's Bluff," said the boy, "and you encouraged him to propose. You admit it," he said, as the girl nodded her head.

"Of course I did. I didn't want him hanging around forever, did I? That's the only way to finish them off. What do you want me to do—string a placard around my neck, saying, 'No proposals received here. Apply at the office of the Red Cross? Would that please you any better? Well, she continued, as the boy kept on, "I thought you said you wanted to help me."

"What are you waiting for, then?" asked Wilfred.

The girl took the trousers and dropped on her knees before him.

"What! You can't be James Whitcomb, who writes verse?"

"That's what they call me at home," was the reply.

Don Platt kept the now famous Hoosier poet as a guest in his home for several months. One morning in the fall, as they were walking up a neighboring road, Riley sat down on a log to write. He at last finished his sheet and tossed into the general's lap a sheet of paper. It was the first manuscript of the well-known poem, "When the Frost Is on the Pumpkin and the Fodder's in the Shock." As long as the general lived he and the now aged poet remained the firmest of friends.—St. Louis Times.

"Yes," replied the prisoner in the cell.

Barbers Act as Coroners.

In Egypt a large proportion of the barbers are state functionaries. According to an edict issued by Ibrahim Pasha in 1818, every village barber was ordered, when death occurred in his district, to make a careful examination of the corpse, and report to the authorities any death occurring through epidemic disease or foul play. Severe penalties were imposed for any neglect of this duty, and a fee of 5 cents was paid for each report registered. Fifty years ago the system of payment by fees was abolished and each village barber now draws from the government a fixed salary for his services.

GIRL AND A BEAR

Brave "Little Sister" Gets Reward for Capturing "A Great Ferocious Monster."

By GERTRUDE MARY SHERIDAN.

"I should die of fright," declared Netta Forbes. "I am sure I should." Why, just think of it, Beauty—way out on the very edge of civilization, wild animals, savages and mountain outlaws! No, thank you, not for me!" "But David will be there," explained Beatrice Merrill, the bride of a week, and she spoke in a simple confident way that indicated her brave bright husband to be a power of valor and strength in her estimation.

"Well, that is a good deal, I will confess," admitted Netta. "But David can't be with you all of the time, can he? If he's going to be the great cat-killer he thinks he is, he must take a lot of work to do. I'm sure you will faint at the first sight of a ferocious cowboy, and as to those Indians—think of seeing them creeping—creeping—creeping through the grass, with their blood-curdling howls and scalp knives—ugh!" and the imaginative Beatrice only smiled sweetly, optimistically. It was true she had been brought up tenderly, the only child of fond doting parents, shielded from every rude alarm, her girlhood experiences a path of ever-blooming roses.

But it was true also that the rugged earnest figure of David Merrill had come into her life as a hero. His love had filled her existence magically. One of nature's real noblemen, he had come from directly next to nature to woo and win and carry away to his rude far western home a timid, inexperienced prairie flower.

And when the eventual departure came, every stage of the journey accomplished seemed to carry Beatrice into a new realm of existence. Even that last stage drive over the lonely hills and into a settlement crude as a frontier mining town, was full of novelty and excitement. Beatrice clapped her hands ingeniously as some of the delighted child at the queer antics of

"Oh, yes," announced Beatrice eagerly, "a great ferocious monster!" "Not at all—a harmless toothless old animal escaped from the circus in Last Limit, but valuable as a trick bear, and $100 offered for its capture."

"Why, what is this?" inquired David Merrill, as he and his hearty crowd sat down to the smoking supper that evening, and he found a little heap of bank notes under his plate.

Then Beatrice told her story, with dancing eyes. And David swung her in the air and kissed her at its termination, while the enthusiastic cowboys gave "Huzzah!" with an admiring echo for their brave "little sister."

BROUGHT WEALTH TO PERU

Guano Beds, Consisting of Most Wonderful of Known Fertilizers, Sold for Immense Sum.

It is said that Humboldt added the greatest wealth to the report of his discovery when he called the serious attention of Europe to the guano beds of Peru.

Near midway of the equator and the tropic of capricorn on the Peruvian coast are the Chincha Islands, whose guano deposits have been worth more in money than the copper, gold and silver of the world's best mines. For this great fertilizer $1,000,000,000 had been paid up to the time that exports were prohibited by Peru itself.

The islands are small, high and rocky, barren and uninhabited to the last degree; yet it is said there is no other spot of equal size on the earth's surface from which so much wealth has been taken.

In some cases the deposits reached a depth of 160 to 180 feet and are calculated to be thousands of years old.

Nowhere else in the world are marine birds found in so great quantities as along this coast. Their presence in such immense numbers is due to the quantities of fish found there, upon which the birds feed. Cormorants, pelicans, seagulls and marine crows, in clouds, numbering hundreds of thousands, may be seen flying low to or from the islands.

But the birds alone could not have produced the Peruvian guano. It was necessary to have the rainiest climate of these islands in order to accomplish the result.

"Rain so seldom falls that aged men can count on the fingers of one hand," says one commentator, "the times in their lives when they have seen this marvelous thing—water falling from the skies."

It is on this account that Peruvian guano in its natural state, never having been exposed to rain or dampness, has retained its nitrogen and is of such great value. Some guano contains all three elements of plant life—nitrate, phosphate and potash—and it contains two elements—phosphates and fixed nitrogen. It sells as high as $100 a ton.

How, then, will the farmer's wife cook fried apples with New Orleans molasses, her chief hold over the farmer's disposition? What will become of the doughnut, dainty piece of resistance of the summer banquets? And chicken, must the toothsome drumstick be wasted because some city folk are feeble digestion? What is to become of the rasher of bacon in these hygienic days? Are ham and eggs with their sunny side up to be obsolete? Throw the frying pan and the ditch, indeed! One might as well ask the farmer to give up planting soy beans and cow peas.—New York Sun.

WHERE FISH ABOUND

Colorado Irrigation Lakes Full of Finny Tribe.

They Are Five in Number and the Water Is Clear, Cold and Sparkling—At Small Depth Temperature Is Low.

Kansas City—North or Lamar, Colo., just across the Kansas line on the Santa Fe railway, is a series of irrigation lakes that have been made by building earthen dams across a creek valley. These lakes are fed by a canal forty miles long, leading from the Arkansas river. The lakes are there as a result of the suit over the waters of the Arkansas, which Kansas lost to Colorado several years ago.

Up there on the Colorado plains, two-thirds of a mile above sea level, is more than one hundred miles of shore line. Smooth, soft green prairie slopes down to the blue water. Curving about into delightful little bays, sweeping back in wide gulches, jutting up in bold headlands, the world of flowers and grass meets and melts into the world of waters. Under the bright sunlight, seen through that crystal air, shimmering and shining, these lakes almost compel the belief that they are a mirage.

Kit Carson, could he again ride across these old familiar plains, would be tempted into trying to ride straight through what he would think must be only an appearance of water. For he and his friends never saw any really wet lake here. On a hot, still day they have seen myriads of birds. But no real water covered these square miles in their day.

These lakes literally swarm with fish. At times they lie upon the surface so thickly that, as their fins move, the whole surface is activated as if a breeze was blowing over it. They are so plentiful that when the water is turned into the irrigation ditches the fish that have spawned and multiplied float down in schools and are carried out upon the fields of alfalfa and other crops, and the farmers gather them up in wagon loads and salt down enough in a week to last them through a whole year.

There are five of these lakes. They were finished in 1885, and the fish have been swimming and increasing in numbers ever since.

The lakes are seven miles north of Lamar, and to get there one must drive over the level prairie. The largest of the lakes is Nenahoe, seven miles long.

A party of Kansas City men went out there recently to fish, and one of them wrote the accompanying account of their experience. The members of the party vouch for the truth of this story in its entirety.

It was a lazy day, under a lazy sun, that swung idly through a sky of glorious blue. About 10 o'clock Art started for camp in the motor to bring out a hot dinner. To pass what hunger was making an age-long hour, Dave proposed a swim.

The surface water was warm and fine. Let yourself down to tread water and your feet would almost freeze. At any time cold drinking water is secured by pushing a jug, tied to the end of a pole, deep into the water, and jerking out the cork with a string. One day a eel-head was lost in eight feet of water. One dive to the bottom after the lost spear quickly convinced the swimmer that Colorado's law against spearing fish should be strictly observed, so far as he was concerned. Even at that depth the cold is extreme. The cold water and complete absence of mud in these lakes explains the fine quality of the fish.

But Information as to Minister's Lost Coat Afforded Little Satisfaction to That Gentleman.

William M. Wood, the head of the woolen industry, said in Boston apropos of the new tariff: "It listens good, as the slang phrase goes, but will it listen good to the very end? Won't the end be a dismal surprise, like the tale of the lost coat?"

"A country minister, driving to church with his overcoat on the seat beside him, lost the coat en route, and announced his loss from the pulpit."

"Dear beloved," he said, "I met with a sad loss this morning. Some where on the River road, while driving to church, I lost my fine, new silk-lined overcoat. If any of you find it, I hope you'll bring it to the parsonage."

"It's found, doctor," said a voice from the back of the church. "Bless you, my friend! Heavens bless you! said the minister, beaming on the speaker gratefully."

"It's found, sir," continued the voice. "I came along the River road just after you, and it wasn't there."

BOKHARA IS VERY PRIMITIVE

Interesting Sideglances on Life of an Almost Unknown People Under the Czar's Rule.

London.—Interesting sideglances on the life of the almost unknown people under the rule of the czar in Central Asia were given by Miss Christie, P. R. U. S., one of the first to be elected to that body, who has recently returned from a journey to Bokhara.

"The eleven gates of Bokhara," said Miss Christie, "were still shut every night at sundown, and the watchmen parade the streets after dark beating drums to show they are awake. The people were very friendly. The Bokhara idea of justice was direct and to the point. They took the condemned persons up to the top of the tower and then threw them down. Once was enough."

"The caravansary in the queer town was similar to those usually found in the east long ago. The little rooms look out over a small balcony into the yard. Underneath the rooms the cattle are kept."

"All the buildings, with the exception of the mosques and the towers, are built of clay, and the method of the builders is simplicity itself. A wooden framework is put up, and in the spaces between the wooden boards are pressed sun-dried balls of mud. Then over all comes more mud and in a very short time a house is built and ready for occupation."

Miss Christie was fortunate enough to see the only going to mosque and she also photographed him, which is considered something of a feat, for no one ever knows which of the many mosques he intends to enter. It was a Friday, and a crowd of subjects gathered near the mosque with in a few yards of the palace.

FISH INTOXICATED ON BEER

Brewery Output Empty Into Stream Causes Chaos Among Fishatorial Tribe.

Mendota, Ill.—There will be no more fishing in the Mendota creek for months to come. It is improbable that the fish will be able to see the bait for several weeks. The banks recently were lined with hundreds of dead fish and the creek was full of others dead drunk.

Because of failure to pay the government tax the Mendota brewery was closed and 1,081 barrels of beer were emptied into the creek.

An hour later a conglomeration of queer sounds arose from the creek. From the moving of catfish to the deep bass of the bass. Several tides were seen disporting themselves absurdly on a log and three bullfrogs staggered arm in arm down Main street, until taken into custody by a policeman. They couldn't hop, despite the fact that they were full of them.

Many of the fish inebriated too freely and climbed out on shore, where they were fatally prostrated by the heat. Those who survived followed the beer down stream in large schools.

HANG UP GIRL TO BEAT HER?

Georgian Is Charged With Inhuman Punishment of His Young Daughter.

Augusta, Ga.—Charges that he fastened a chain around the neck of his fifteen-year-old daughter, suspended her from a meat hook in his butcher shop and beat her with the butt end of a whip until the blood flowed from her wounds, were made against J. J. Johnson in the recorder's court.

Policeman Moore, who arrested Johnson, stated that he was called by neighbors who heard the girl's scream. The policeman said that when he reached the market he found Johnson's daughter, Nella, suspended from a meat hook, suspended by a chain which had been wrapped twice around her neck and locket. Moore said that the girl's arms and neck showed evidence of severe beating. She was exhausted when released.

Johnson said he whipped his daughter because he could not control her. His case was continued. One of the specific charges against him is assault with intent to murder.

Kills Self With Ninth Shot. Vonkers, N. Y.—Carl H. Nyström, fifty-seven, a machinist, used up nine shots before he succeeded in killing himself at his home here. After firing his revolver once he had dumped the empty shells upon the floor and reloaded the pistol. Five bullets were imbedded in the walls and ceiling, three lodged in the man's abdomen and the ninth penetrated the brain.

Blinders or Veils, Which? Boston.—"It is going to be a choice between blinders for the men or veils for the women," said the Rev. Frederick E. Heath, pastor of the Warren Baptist church here, discussing the latest dresses worn by women. He asserted that the new styles in dress cause disgust to the "right minded."

At what AGE is WOMAN MOST BEAUTIFUL?

MRS. HELEN D. CLAYTON

W O to beautiful ideals, long nurtured and jealously guarded! An old woman is handsome, wrinkles are becoming, and a dash of rouge no more is a crime against the sympathy of feminine loveliness.

Evil days have befallen the traditional "bloom of youth," "chestnut tresses" and the youthful "brown eyes" of which poets have sung immemorial. Grandmother at last is coming into her own. She is ennobled upon an artistic pedestal for the edification of those "snips of girlhood" who have the temerity to hint "she was handsome in her day." She's a beauty right now, thank you!

Mother and grandmother owe their idealistic rejuvenation to the New York men whose stock in trade is feminine loveliness—the artists who paint and etch and model. They've taken us down a bit, those of us who wear of fair hair, bewitching eyes, peach-bloom tints and aquiline features. For on this single point they are unison.

A woman can be beautiful at fifty. Harken to what Harrison Fisher, Irvin Wiles, Edwin Blashfield and Victor D. Brenner say. This galaxy of illustrators, painters, mural decorators and sculptors has come to the defense of physical beauty in a woman past the middle span of life. They've all seen matrons and spinsters who were handsome when the half-century post had faded on the ten-year distant horizon.

Cheer up, mothers, grandmothers, aunts and cousins—you who silversprinkled tresses droop over sylvan folds of face and brow! What matters it if nature rebels at the strain of busy life and sears your velvet cheeks with the inevitable wrinkles of motherly devotion? You're handsome still!

The fair debutante may appeal to the eye for beauty no more than her mother from whom the color of buoyant youth has flown; whose flesh has lost the satin gloss of girlhood days; whose tender lips have compressed in the firmness that comes of mental strength and mature character.

None the less is the artistic eye today appreciative of vigorous girlhood with its luminous flesh and radiant nature. But it has turned to another quarter for a type of beauty that has survived from the birth of man, but never shone resplendent in the light of public approval.

The mature woman—she who has the fullness of life, the mental development and the strong force of character written in every age line of her countenance—has been called beautiful. She has been striving for this verdict for centuries and centuries, but only now has her day of reckoning with youth come. She can match her charms with her sex in its teens and stand before the modern day court of art without fear or favor. The middle and the past middle-aged women of New York have heard the verdict. You are beautiful!

Victor D. Brenner, sculptor, who knows the soft and pleasing lines of figure as well as he knows the face, is to the fore as the most outspoken and uncompromising indorse of this new viewpoint in art. "All women are to be admired," he put it generally, and declares that femininity in every condition of servitude and age has points for artistic admiration.

The poetic has its place in Sculptor Brenner's reasoning as much as the hard and fast rules for physical perfection. He personifies the time-worn adage: "Beauty is only skin deep." Beneath the flesh, beneath the walls of muscle and the frame of bone goes Sculptor Brenner for his ideals. Mentally, morally and warmth of heart are all his prescribed ingredients for the most beautiful woman.

"Beauty all depends upon the viewpoint of the individual sculptor," declares Mr. Brenner. "He is influenced by the nature of his subject, by the task he has before him. If beauty of childhood is his theme, then his whole heart and soul are wrapped in the infinite lines of tenderness and delight to be found in early youth."

If the sculptor seeks the poetry of springtime, he perforce requisitions beauty of an age from eighteen to twenty. He none the less appreciates this bloom of early life and it can't help but draw forth his admiration.

"From twenty-five to thirty I might classify as another type of beauty; a beauty that is beginning to bloom in all its radiance, fully developed and taking on the richness of a valley flower before the touch of withering heat."

"From thirty-five to forty takes us to a period where the average human uneducated in more than a superficial appreciation of beauty might remark that voluptuousness was giving way to the ravages of age. I have found many, many beautiful between the ages of thirty-five and forty—positively handsome."

"This brings us to the half-century mark, where woman has all the strength of character imparted by a lifetime of observation. Here enters personal magnetism, a factor which figures largely in the determination of beauty. If face, form and temperament harmonize, she is placed in the category of the lovely."

"I have seen women fifty years old who I considered exceedingly handsome."

Edwin Blashfield, mural decorator, says: "There are four types or ages of beauty—children, who are most handsome; youth, between the ages of sixteen and nineteen; middle age, ranging from twenty-five to thirty, and women who are mounting the ladder of time toward the half-century mark."

"I have seen many handsome women at forty-five and fifty. Sometimes wrinkles are exceedingly beautiful in women of that age. Persons who use their brains a great deal in after life generally are exceedingly attractive. Wrinkles enhance this type."

"I have no particular choice of beauty as regards age. I use models from nineteen to thirty, but by no means do I consider they are the embodiment of all that is beautiful."

Harrison Fisher, illustrators, has his personal tastes as regards the age of charming women.

"I prefer the beauty of a woman from sixteen to twenty-eight," he says. "Between those periods of life I consider her the most charming because she embodies all the spirit of youth, the happiness of girlhood and lacks the weariness of worldliness that comes to a woman later in life. But I am not deprecating the attractions of older women. I have seen them at thirty and thirty-five and even forty whom I consider more handsome than girls. I know women of fifty who I consider embody all the elements of general beauty. They may have lost some of the fairness of their girlhood days, but they have made up for it in physical development, in mental sharpness and in the strong characteristics of the face."

"There are, of course, many good-looking women in New York. It's hard to pick out any particular beauty of any type or of any age. Women all are to be admired."

Irvin Wiles, eminent portrait painter, who has daily opportunities to observe types of beauty, is more lenient as to advanced age than either Mr. Fisher, Mr. Brenner or Mr. Blashfield.

"I have seen women who were handsome at seventy," he declared. "A woman at thirty may be far more handsome than one at fifteen or eighteen. They say age is no respecter of beauty, but you may reverse it and remark that beauty is no respecter of age. Much of the secret of beauty depends upon the physical and mental care a woman takes of herself. The portrait painter does not look so much for beauty in his subject as he does for the medium that permits of an automobile. The peculiar vehicle is named "La Sauterelle," or the grasshopper, because of its peculiar gliding flight over the irregularities of the desert."

Barrie, Extremely Modest.

A cablegram from London says that on the day the public announcement was made that James M. Barrie, author of "Peter Pan" and other comedies that Maude Adams has made familiar to American theatergoers, had been given a baronetcy by King George of England, the new Sir James stayed close indoors and "shied himself" at all callers. That was entirely characteristic of the man.

Sir James is probably the most modest great writer that Scotland has ever produced. The cablegram ought to have told how many times during that day of acclamation he flitted and emptied his big pipe. The pipe is his constant and as a rule his sole companion. It is his confidant, just like his cane was to that old fellow in Dickens' "Our Mutual Friend."

There Lay the Worry.

"I say, Sambo," asked a man of an improvident negro who had lost a job for the third or fourth time, "aren't you worried over the question of wherewithal to support you?"

"Lordy, Marse Henry," was the reply. "I ain't worryin' 'bout wherewithal, 'ise worryin' 'bout de wherewithal de berryin'."

him to emphasize beauty. Of course the majority of our sisters want us to paint them as beautiful as is consistent with the laws of art. A woman of thirty has developed. She has learned the value of dress, how to attire herself in a manner that enhances any physical charms she may possess. Girlhood lacks the development of more mature age. Therefore, a woman of thirty may present a far more attractive appearance than the girl in her teens or just past the twenty mark.

"The woman beauty at fifty is less in evidence than the handsome feminine in her teens or below the age of thirty. But I have seen handsome women at fifty; women whose features, whose personalities and whose physical development struck me as being amazingly handsome."

"From my view I don't think dress has much to do with good looks. The true lover of beauty gazes and can enthuse over cut of features and tint of complexion without dwelling on clothes. I consider a woman between the age of eighteen and twenty to be in the bloom of youth. Naturally, youth is attractive; it is like a rose in its brilliancy beneath a light morning dew."

Those seeds you sold me for flower seeds were nothing but weed seeds.

"Come up, have they?"

"Of course not; I only planted them day before yesterday."

"Then how do you know they are weed seeds?"

"The neighbors' chickens don't dig them up."

PLANNING AND PLANNING.

"I am planning a trip to the Panama canal."

"That so? So is President Wilson."

"But the trip he is planning is altogether different from the one I am planning."

"That so?"

"Yes, he's going."

WRITING THAT PAYS.

"What does this young fellow write? I won't have my daughter married to a starving author."

"Off the handle, as usual, dad. That young chap wrote $400,000 worth of life insurance last year."

A FREQUENT HAPPENING.

"We don't do as we should. For one thing, we are told to love our enemies."

"A great many of us live up to that. Didn't you ever notice a couple of society leaders kissing each other?"

HER OPPORTUNITY AT LAST

Mr. Timkins Naturally Anxious That His Wife Should See the Burglar at Work.

"Can I believe my eyes?" exclaimed Mr. Timkins of East Orange as he confronted the burglar. Mr. Timkins had been sent down in the middle of the night to investigate a strange noise, which proved to be the family silver in process of packing up.

The burglar reached for his gun, but Mr. Timkins grabbed the hand instead.

"Don't," he said, giving the hand a cordial shake. "You don't know how much I'm interested in you. Stay awhile. I want you to meet Mrs. Timkins."

"While you're calling a cop! Not on your life!" retorted the burglar.

"No," said Mr. Timkins, "I just want you to stay while I call my wife. She's heard you at work every night for 29 years and this is the first chance she's had to see you."—New York Evening Post.

SCALP TROUBLE FOR YEARS

268 Harrison St., Elyria, Ohio.—"My case was a scalp trouble. I first noticed small bunches on my scalp which commenced to itch and I would scratch them and in time they got larger, forming a scab or scab with little pock, and chunks of hair would come out when I would scratch them off. It caused me to lose most of my hair. It became thin and dry and lifeless. I was troubled for over ten years with it until it got so bad I was ashamed to go to a barber to get my hair cut."

"I tried everything I could get hold of, and— and— and— but received no cure until I commenced using Cuticura Soap and Ointment when the scalp commenced to disengage itself. The way I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment was to wash my scalp twice a day with warm water and Cuticura Soap and rub on the Cuticura Ointment. I received benefit in a couple of weeks and was cured in two months."

Careful Henry. "Papa," said her father, "how does it happen that I find four good cigars on the parlor table this morning? Did Henry leave them for me?"

"No," he took them out of his vest pocket to avoid breaking them last night, and he must have forgotten all about them afterward."

The laugh that followed made her wish that she had been as careful with her speech as Henry had been with his cigars.

But Information as to Minister's Lost Coat Afforded Little Satisfaction to That Gentleman.

William M. Wood, the head of the woolen industry, said in Boston, upholders of the new tariff:

"It is a good thing, as the slang phrase goes, but will it listen good to the very end? Won't the cat be a bit surprised, like the tale of the lost coat?"

"A country minister, driving to church with his new overcoat on the seat beside him, lost the coat en route, and announced his loss from the pulpit."

"Dearest beloved," he said, "I met with a sad loss this morning. Some where on the river road, while driving to church, I lost my fine new, silk-lined overcoat. If any of you find it, I hope you'll bring it to the parsonage."

"It's found, doctor," said a voice from the back of the church.

"Hess you, my friend! Heaven bless you!" said the minister, beaming on the speaker gratefully.

"It's found, sir," continued the voice. "I came along the river road just after you, and it wasn't there."

BOKHARA IS VERY PRIMITIVE

Interesting Side-lights on Life of an Almost Unknown People Under the Czar's Rule.

London.—Interesting side-lights on the life of the almost unknown people under the rule of the czar in Central Asia were given by Miss Christie, F. R. G. S., one of the first to be elected to that body, who has recently returned from a journey to Bokhara.

"The eleven gates of Bokhara," said Miss Christie, "are still shut every night at sundown, and the watchmen round the streets after dark, beating drums to show they are awake. The people were very friendly. The Bokhara idea of justice was direct and to the point. They took the condemned persons up to the top of the tower and then threw them down. Once was enough."

"The caravansary in the queer town was similar to those usually found in the east long ago. The little round look out over a small balcony into the yard. Underneath the rooms the cattle are kept."

"All the buildings, with the exception of the mosques and the towers, are built of clay, and the method of the buildings is simplicity itself. A wooden framework is put up, and in the spaces between the wooden boards are pressed sun dried balls of mud. Then over all comes more mud, and in a very short time a house is built and ready for occupation."

Miss Christie was fortunate enough to see the Emir going to mosque and she also photographed him, which is considered something of a feat, for no one ever knows which of the many mosques he intends to enter. It was a Friday, and a crowd of subjects gathered near the mosque within a few yards of the palace.

Miss Christie was fortunate enough to see the Emir going to mosque and she also photographed him, which is considered something of a feat, for no one ever knows which of the many mosques he intends to enter. It was a Friday, and a crowd of subjects gathered near the mosque within a few yards of the palace.

A wooden framework is put up, and in the spaces between the wooden boards are pressed sun dried balls of mud. "A Girl of the Underworld" is a strong play in more ways than one. It is intensely interesting, full of strong situations, yet there is a splendid vein of comedy running through the piece, even to the very end. The characters never offend, or create a feeling of being over-drawn or lacking in the touch of nature, so essential to real dramatic worth. The girl in the play has a counterpart in every town and village throughout this broad land. The principal incidents are taken from real life, and ring true. This remarkable play will have its first presentation at Daly's Theater on Tuesday, August 5th. Prices 25, 35, 50 and 75 cents.
